Charges Made Against C.C.F. Termed False

FORT WILLIAM, July 28.—(CP)—M. J. Coldwell, national leader of the C.C.F. party, declared in a speech here last night that "Charges by defenders of the old order that the C.C.F. wants to take everything away from everyone, are not only false but opposite of what the plain people formed the party to do."

Mr. Coldwell was speaking in support of Mayor Garfield Anderson, C.C.F. candidate contesting Fort William in the Ontario general election, Aug. 4.

"True, we hope to prevent a few greedy individuals and corporations from possessing the whole country," Mr. Coldwell said. "We want more people to own more things. We want every family to possess securely a home which they may enjoy and extend. We want those who till the soil to possess the farms they use without fear of debt or dispossession. We want the men who operate the great machines to take part in the management of the industries in which they serve.

ANSWERS DREW

Mr. Coldwell charged that George A. Drew, leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party was telling campaign meetings that if the C.C.F. gained power insurance policies, superannuations would be of little value and that property and produce would become the property of the government.

"Such campaigning, of course, is almost beneath an intelligent person's contempt," Mr. Coldwell declared. "But perhaps I should say this: The Bennett government Mr. Drew supported in Ottawa in the early 1930's found it necessary to pass an order-in-council to prevent the publication of the balance sheets of certain insurance companies and financial institutions, because their publication would have revealed that reckless speculation had brought them to the verge of ruin and life insurance policies and savings were in the direst danger.

"The C.C.F. program states that such institutions would be brought under the direct control of the country so that behind them would be placed, not speculative stocks and bonds of doubtful value, but the whole resources of the country in which we live."

Light Sea Forces Stage Sharp Clash

LONDON, July 28.—(CP)—Light British naval forces fought a close-range battle with a dozen enemy armed trawlers and motor torpedoboats off Cherbourg, France, early yesterday and left two German ships blazing, an admiralty communique announced today.

One British warship was hit seriously, but was taken in tow and with the aid of a smoke screen successfully taken to port, the communique said. Enemy shore batteries also participated in the brief engagement, but without effect.

Moscow Dateline

THE Book About Russia

For 20 years Russia fooled the "experts". But it did not fool Associated Press Correspondent Henry C. Cassidy.

After years in Russia, Cassidy has just written the best-seller—MOSCOW DATELINE. It is called the soundest book on Russia yet published.

Accurate, fair, highly interesting, MOSCOW DATELINE is the first book to tell the full story of the Russian war to date, the only book to tell the dramatic inside stories of the historic Stalin conferences with Churchill and Willkie, the only book to answer the big questions about the Soviets.

INVASION BARGE MINUS ITS CREW FOUND IN OCEAN

LONDON, July 28.—(CP)—An invasion barge loaded with Lockheed interceptor planes found bobbing around without a crew in mid-Atlantic provided the Royal Navy with a mystery today.

The barge was superficially damaged on the nose and had apparently been struck by flying debris, but it was still seaworthy enough to be towed to the Belfast docks. Several empty lifeboats were found near the barge.

Nazis Continue Retreat Before Soviet Troops

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN

MOSCOW, July 28. — (AP) — Retreating Germans are burning villages, impressing the inhabitants into labor gangs and forcing them to dig trenches and dugouts for the last desperate defence of Orel on the central Russian front, Red Army dispatches declared today.

A Russian communique reported that Field Marshal Guenther von Kluege's army was continuing to fall back as the Soviets pressed in on three sides of the big Nazi base.

Savage battles were being fought on the sector northwest of Orel. Where the Russian troops were cutting in toward the Bryansk railway. The exact locality was not identified in the Russian dispatches but it was believed to be in the vicinity of the Orel-Bryansk railway which the Russians have had under artillery fire since the capture of Studenkovo. The town is five miles from the railway which is the only avenue of escape for German forces facing encirclement in Orel.

It was believed that the Red army artillery barrage has seriously hampered, if not halted traffic on the railway but there is no indication from the Russian reports that the line has yet been cut.

Canadian Shares In Plane Slaughter

NEAR CATANIA, Sicily, July 28.—(CP)—A Canadian fighter pilot, Sgt. Donald Rathwell, of St. Vital, Man., shared in Monday's greatest aerial slaughter of the Sicilian campaign, it was announced today.

He was part of the British Spitfire force which shot down 21 German transport planes, four German fighters and one Italian fighter.

Rathwell downed one Junkers-52 transport.

The flier described the foray as "an absolute shambles, reminiscent of earlier and similar destruction of transport aircraft in the Tunisian campaign.

There are approximately 25 R.C.A.F. men flying in Sicily-based fighter-bomber wing which has been doing spectacular work over the enemy positions near Catania, bombing supply lines and strong points.

Yesterday PO. Malcolm Bakken of Edmonton returned from a patrol with flak holes in his plane.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 28.—Canadian troops of the Eighth Army were driving forward in the centre of the Allied line in Sicily against bitter German opposition, reports from the front today said, while Americans on the left also were making progress. The main Allied offensive line was advanced about 15 miles, but on the Eighth Army's coastal sector fighting was reduced to patrol action.

Front reports said the Germans were digging in on a solid line beginning at San Stefano on the north coast, running south and east through Nicosia and Catenanuova and along the Dittaino river to the east coast.

OCCUPY CEFALU

Official announcements said the Americans had occupied Cefalu, north coast harbor 35 miles east of Palermo, and, with other troops from the centre, had taken Petralia, Polizzo, Generosa and Alimena.

The Germans massed for a pitched battle to hold their last one-eighth of the island, were reported

Some Italians Leave Balkans

ISTANBUL, July 26.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Reports from the Balkans today indicated that Italian troops are being partically evacuated from Albania and Greece.

General evacuation of Italian units from Albania and Greece was believed here to have been one of the main subjects of last week's conference between Mussolini and Hitler, with the latter refusing to consent to a wholesale withdrawal.

Reports from the Balkans said that two leading Bulgarian generals had conferred with the Italian commander in Albania within the past five days, arousing speculation that Bulgarian troops would replace Italian forces evacuated from Albania.

Hankow Raided By U.S. Planes

AT U.S. AIR HEADQUARTERS IN CHINA, July 26—(Delayed)—(AP)—U.S. medium bombers and fighters raided Hankow today, destroying enemy installations and shooting down 13 Japanese fighters in retaliation for Japanese attacks on advanced American bases in the last three days.

The toll increased to 44 the number of enemy aircraft destroyed since the Japanese raids began July 23—the first enemy offensive action since May 17—compared with losses of two American planes.

The Japanese lost 13 planes Friday, 14 on Saturday, four on Sunday and 13 again today.

All the American planes and crews returned without mishap today.

German Troops Massing Along Hungary Border

ISTANBUL, July 28. — (AP) — German troops are massing at several points along the Hungarian frontier, according to reports reaching here last night. Unofficial Total

275 Nominees Will Contest Ontario Seats

TORONTO, July 28. — (CP) — Candidates of three major political parties and of several smaller groups today prepared for the stretch drive in the Aug. 4 Ontario general election with official nominations scheduled for this afternoon in the province's 90 ridings.

An unofficial total compiled from nominations at party conventions shows that 275 candidates are preparing to enter the race, nine more than the 266 who contested the 1937 general election and 13 more than the 262 of 1934.

The Progressive Conservative party headed by Lt.-Col. George A. Drew leads in the number of nominations with 90—one in every riding.

LIBERALS HAVE 89

Premier Nixon's Liberal government forces have 89 candidates in the field and the only riding in which there is no candidate running as a Liberal is Elgin. There Mitchell F. Hepburn, former Liberal premier, is standing as an Independent Liberal. However, Liberal party headquarters in Toronto says that Mr. Hepburn, who was nominated at a Liberal convention, is regarded as a candidate for the party.

The C.C.F. group led by E. B. Jolliffe is making its strongest bid for power in Ontario with 85 candidates likely to enter the field. In 1937 the C.C.F. had 37 candidates although none was elected.

There are 11 candidates not affiliated with the major parties.

Italians Silent On Demands For Full Surrender

LONDON, July 28. — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill answered with a short "No" today when asked in the House of Commons whether any reply had been received to repeated requests for Italian capitulation.

"No official reply has been received to the message from President Roosevelt and myself," he said, "unless the disappearance of Mussolini is to be considered a reply to it."

His reference to Mussolini brought a burst of laughter from the members.

Asked if he felt that an apology for bombing Rome would serve any useful purpose, the prime minister replied:

NO APOLOGY

"His Majesty's government have not made any apology for bombing the marshalling yards near Rome. On the contrary, if they are repaired, and hostile military traffic is resumed, they will no doubt have to be bombed again."

Mr. Churchill said that all his information concerning the political, military and social consequences of the Rome raid were "highly encouraging."

1. To abrogate the 14-year-old law under which the fascist grand council became an organ of the state, the law being "incompatible with the return to constitutional normality."

2. To suppress the special tribunal for defence of the state. It was ordered that cases ordinarily tried by the tribunal would be transferred to military courts of the army corps "during the duration of actual war."

Japanese Claim Allies Attempt Raid Hong Kong

LONDON, July 28—(CP)—The Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said today that an attempt by six Allied planes to raid Hong Kong yesterday was blocked by the city's anti-aircraft defences. Heavy flak, the radio reported, caused the planes to jettison their bombs in the water.

The report was not confirmed by Allied sources.

LONDON, July 28—(BUP)—Strong formations of Flying Fortresses raided Kassel and Oschersleben in Germany today and shot down at least 69 German fighter planes. Twenty-three bombers are missing.

LONDON, July 28.—British Empire air forces dropped more than 2,300 tons of bombs on Hamburg last night in the biggest raid of the war and sixth in 72 hours on Germany's first port and second city, the air ministry announced tonight.

For the second time in four nights, battered and blazing Hamburg rocked under the greatest weight of bombs ever loosed against a single target, the air ministry revealed in announcing that last night's tonnage exceeded the 2,300 tons with which the annihilation assault on the city was launched.

The new all-time high in tonnage dropped by a single raiding force was achieved in a Thunderbolt assault packed into 45 minutes of furious bombardment by a massive force of British and Canadian bombers and aircraft manned by other dominion airmen.

The R.A.F. and dominion forces achieved a new peak of efficiency at a cost of 18 bombers lost over Hamburg and in subsidiary attacks on the Ruhr.

Air Marshal Sir Arthur T. Harris, chief of the bomber command, in mapping the second record attack on Hamburg planned to shave five minutes from the time of the 2,300-ton raid Saturday night. He succeeded and the air ministry explained:

"Every such cut in the bombing period means greater destruction

Lift Restrictions On Gristing Wheat

OTTAWA, July 28 — (CP) — Effective Aug. 1, start of the new crop year, wheat producers in the prairie provinces may have an unlimited quantity of wheat gristed for family use outside of their established delivery quotas, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced today.

At the start of the current crop year farmers were permitted to have 40 bushels gristed, but the wheat was to be taken from the authorized quota. Then on July 6 Mr. MacKinnon announced that farmers could have 100 bushels gristed outside the quota.

For 1943-44 there is no restriction on gristing, except that "it must be a producer's own wheat and for family use only," Mr. MacKinnon said today.

"The new policy for the crop year 1943-44 allows wheat producers to have wheat gristed for their own family use outside of wheat quotas in effect and outside of the 14-bushel per acre delivery quota for the crop year 1943-44."

Hon. John Hart, premier of British Columbia, who arrived in Edmonton Tuesday night to confer with Maj.-Gen. W. W. Foster, D.S.O., special commissioner for the Canadian government on Northwest war projects. Premier Hart and his party will leave for Dawson Creek, B.C., after talks with Maj.-Gen. Foster.

B.C. Premier Says

Three Routes Are Surveyed For New Road

Three routes are being surveyed for the proposed $6,000,000 link between the Alaska Highway and the British Columbia highway system, Hon. John Hart, premier of the Pacific ocean province, stated Wednesday on his arrival here to confer with Maj. Gen. W. W. Foster, D.S.O., special commissioner for the Canadian government on North-West war projects.

He will leave Wednesday afternoon for Dawson Creek, B.C., and Fort Nelson, and will also take a trip to Hudson Hope while north.

At Dawson Creek he will determine the requirements of that war centre for sewage and water facilities, and continue negotiations with United States army officials on these installations.

Premier Hart said that the sewage system would cost approximately $75,000 and the installation of a water system about $125,000. These installations, he added, would be war measures and would be undertaken by the Dominion and provincial governments.

Accompanying him on the trip are Percy C. Richards, his private secretary, and E. H. Bridgeman, deputy minister of municipal affairs.

SURVEY PARTIES

Two survey parties are now in the field to determine the route of the highway link between the Alaska Highway and the British Columbia highway system, Premier Hart stated. They are looking over a route from Finlay Forks, another through Pine Pass, and a third through the Monkman Pass. If this work is undertaken, he said, the approximate cost of the link would be $6,000,000.

Asked if there was an prospect of the construction of a railway from Prince George, B.C., to Skagway, Alaska, he said this project was still being discussed, but there was no sign of action.

LONDON, July 28.—Reports that Italian premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio had initiated a peace move through British and American representatives at Vatican City came from several sources today as violent anti-Fascist clashes increased in northern Italy and demonstrations spread southward to the Naples area.

There still was no official confirmation that negotiations had been started.

Fascists, defying the new regime that deposed Benito Mussolini, were reported in Swiss dispatches to have taken refuge on the top floor of the newspaper Popolo D'Italia at Milan, from where they threw bombs on soldiers and a crowd of anti-Fascist demonstrators, causing many casualties.

HOLD HOSTAGES

The dispatches said that the soldiers, under Badoglio's orders, brought armored cars and small tanks to the scene but hesitated to train their cannon on the building because the Fascists were holding many hostages, including women and children.

One report said the Fascists barricaded on the top floor attempted to placate the crowd by throwing a prominent Fascist named Oreste Bonomi, formerly a member of Mussolini's cabinet from the roof. The report said Bonomi was immediately mauled to death by the crowd.

Two soldiers were killed during last night's disorders when they attempted to turn searchlights on the newspaper buildings. The Fas-

Ontario Vote Gauge to Show C.C.F. Strength

By NORMAN MacLEOD

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

TORONTO, July 28.—Veteran Ontario politicians view the current election turmoil in this staid old province as unique in the fact that while no outstanding issue is up before the voters, the results next Wednesday will go far towards supplying the answer to perhaps the biggest question in the whole realm of Canadian politics today.

That question is: How great a threat to the old line parties is the growing might of the C.C.F.?

Not since the Farmers' party swept into power under E. C. Drury, away back in 1919, has Ontario had any phenomenon to compare with the now-rolling, crusading provincial C.C.F. movement.

SOME SIMILARITIES

In some respects indeed, the analogy between the U.F.O. in 1919 and the C.C.F. in 1943 is striking. For instance:

Like the U.F.O., the Ontario C.C.F. is at present still a "grass roots" movement. It is financed largely by passing the hat at the meetings which its candidates address. And the old adage about the hearts of the contributors following their treasure still holds good.

In the second place, the C.C.F. in the present campaign further resembles the U.F.O. in the fact that it threatens the domination of a class group. Only in this case it is not the farmers but the industrial workers of the province who have set out to capture the reins of political power. While in farming communities the C.C.F. menace is not causing serious concern, reports to both the old line parties have it that the populous C.I.O. unions, both in industrial centres of old Ontario and in the mines and paper mills of the northern ridings, are laboring intensively in the C.C.F. cause.

PROPAGANDA SKILL

So much for the very ominous parallel which Liberals and Progressive Conservative alike discern between the 1919 U.F.O. sweep and the 1943 C.C.F. menace. Add to it the fact that, by a skill in propaganda which no other party is showing and by the possession of adequate campaign funds.

One piece of evidence which indicates how successfully the C.C.F. has put its propaganda message across to the Ontario people occurred the other night in one of the most popular radio quiz programs. The prize money had pyramided until it amounted to $200. The master of ceremonies figured that it was time to give the contestants a break and so, for his $200 question he asked "Who is the prime minister of Ontario?" and the unlucky contestant, in all innocence replied "M. J. Coldwell" (National C.C.F. leader).

At the present time, the old line parties are prepared to concede the C.C.F. all the way from 15 seats next Wednesday to a chance of forming the next government of the province.

First he approached a machine-gun position which was holding up the advance and wiped it out with a tommy gun. Then when the commander fell, he rallied the ranks and led them in hand-to-hand fighting which captured the hill. Ram died a few minutes after the position was stormed.

SMASH EMBLEMS

Street fighters in Northern Italy smashed Fascist emblems and tore up photographs of Benito Mussolini, according to reports reaching Spain through France today.

Mussolini's former "Black Shirt" militiamen had been ordered to remain in their barracks at least until regular army uniforms are provided, it was reported.

Strikes were said to have broken out in munitions plants in the north.

Italian demonstrators appeared to be violently anti-Fascist and loyal to the King and Marshal Badoglio, according to fragmentary reports.

The Milan newspaper Corriere Della Sera said demonstrations were sweeping southward to Naples and other areas directly threatened by Allied invasion if Sicily falls. It said the Socialist newspaper, "Monday," which the Fascists suppressed 20 years ago, had re-appeared in Rome.

All export of food to Germany has ceased, the newspaper said.

CHIEF TARGET

The fascist organization, created by deposed Benito Mussolini, was the chief target of demonstrators in the northern industrial area, especially at Milan, where 30 casualties were reported in violent clashes with local fascist groups holding out against units of the army. The outbreaks, some of which developed into pitched battles, were reportedly led by Socialists. Demonstrators waved red flags in some instances.

Reliable diplomatic sources in London said a tense behind-the-scenes struggle was believed in progress between the German government and Badoglio, with the question of Italy's continuance in the war at stake.

It was reported Badoglio was seeking to induce the Germans to evacuate all Italian territory in order to save Italy from becoming a battlefield, following its capitulation to the Allies.

GERMAN PRESSURE

The Germans, through diplomatic channels, were said to be applying the utmost pressure to keep Italy in the war. This was believed to be part of a plan to establish a strong German line on the river Po in northern Italy and evacuate German troops in southern Italy to that line.

Dispatches from all neutral listening posts adjacent to Nazi-controlled Europe reported many peace feelers, but for the time being Badoglio appeared to be faced with grave problems in maintaining order in northern Italy, where at least 30 casualties were reported, chiefly in Milan demonstrations.

GERMANS NERVOUS

German reaction was reported extremely nervous regarding Italy, but Hitler's worries also were increased by indirect reports that Hungary was extending tentative peace feelers toward the Allies and by reports of precautions by the Spanish government against possible opposition to Gen. Francisco Franco's regime.

Developments included:

1—Disorders at Milan in which there were 30 casualties including several dead. (NBC reported 10 were killed at Milan.)

Many other clashes and pitched battles were reported between Fascists who barricaded themselves in their homes and fired on soldiers and crowds outside.

A Moscow broadcast, recorded by CBS, said that a huge crowd surrounded the German embassy in Rome without being opposed by troops, but that the German representatives had fled.

(The BBC said that the Milan demonstrators carried red flags and that disorders extended through Rome, Bologna, Florence, Turin and other big cities, with some Fascist groups still resisting the regular army forces.)

NOT CONFIRMED

2—The report of the suicide of Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale d'Italia and long known as the mouthpiece for deposed Benito Mussolini, originated in Marseilles and wasn't confirmed from any other source.

3—The Nazi-controlled Scandinavian telegraph bureau reported that the Germans had rejected Italian requests to withdraw Nazi troops from Italy, presumably to maintain order. Usually reliable sources in London reported that Hungary was putting out peace feelers through Turkey and that Rumania and Bulgaria might follow suit. Yugoslav sources reported that Italian occupation troops had started moving out of the Balkans and that German replacements were moving in.

REPORT PEACE MOVES

4—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, who has sometimes been mentioned as a possible peace negotiator, cancelled engagements in South Africa and left by airplane for the north. Madrid dispatches again reported that peace negotiations had been started through Vatican City, but in London it was stated that no move had been made by Italy up to noon today.

(Radio Rome, recorded by NBC, denied that any move toward peace had been launched by the new Italian government.)

The Turkish Anatolian news agency said that Raffaele Guariglia, named foreign minister in Marshal Pietro Badoglio's new Italian government, still was in Ankara yesterday despite a premature report of his departure and "if he delays his departure after tonight, important events must be impending."

NO CONTACT CERTAIN

Guariglia, as Italian ambassador to Turkey, has had an opportunity to contact British and American diplomats, but there was no indication that he has done so. He conferred Tuesday with Turkish foreign minister Numan Menemencioglu and it was considered noteworthy that President Gen. Ismet Inonu was due to return to Ankara last night.

A British United Press dispatch from Ankara said that Guariglia in recent months has openly asserted that Italy would do well to quit the war as best she can.

Radio Rome was heard broadcasting early this afternoon an appeal to the Italian people not to believe "rumors about sensational events being put out by irresponsible elements with the only aim of disturbing public order."

MILAN FIGHTING

Swiss dispatches quoted an Italian newspaper as reporting that four fascists have been killed and 25 wounded, three severely, in riots in the northern Italian industrial centre of Milan.

The newspaper Corriere Della Sera of Milan said Fascists barricaded themselves in their homes and in office buildings and fired on soldiers and crowds outside. Most of the fascists were dislodged and arrested.

Riots have broken out in Milan prison, according to a Corriere Della Sera dispatch broadcast by the Swiss radio. At least one prisoner was killed and several injured. The prison carpenter shop was set afire.

Despite the flood of rumors pouring out of European capitals, however, there still was no authoritative word of what actually was occurring inside Italy, or of what has happened to the deposed Premier Benito Mussolini.

REPORT ON DUCE

The latest unconfirmed report regarding Mussolini's whereabouts came from Madrid, where a neutral diplomat told the British United Press that the former Duce and other prominent Fascists had been arrested and taken under strong military guard to Villa Conti in Rome, where they were being held incommunicado.

Italy Demands More Nazi Help To Stay in War

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ

MADRID, July 28.—(AP)—Italians who arrived here by plane from Rome during the past 24 hours declared today that Italy would continue the war on the side of the Axis only if Germany gives adequate aid to the defence of southern Italy against the threat of Allied invasion.

Word from Rome apart from official communiques from the new government, indicated that the Germans were still trying to convince Premier Pietro Badoglio that they have abandoned a plan to retire behind the Po river and would fight with Italy in defence of central and southern Italy against any Allied thrust.

These reports said, however, that Badoglio and King Victor Emmanuel must decide how long they can ride the wave of enthusiasm which greeted the virtual end of Fascism, and whether the people after their wild demonstrations over what seemed to them liberation, could buckle down and continue the fight beside the Nazis—the Allies chosen by the regime whose downfall they celebrated.

LISTEN TO CHURCHILL

Italians who left Rome Monday night asserted that Prime Minister Churchill's speech to the house of commons had a larger radio audience in Italy than any Allied broadcast since Italy entered the war. The speech was broadcast in Italian by the BBC.

The Fascist ban on foreign broadcasts had disappeared with the downfall of Mussolini, these Italians said, and Mr. Churchill's warning that the Badoglio government had not yet approached the United Nations fell on receptive ears.

Canuck Troops Make Headway On Sicily Front

sandwiching Italian troops among their units, but only for labor rather than fighting.

The Allied line ran from below Catania on the east coast to the Port of Cefalu on the north, but the major German stand was expected along the Dittaino river against the Eighth Army.

It was learned that two Italian field divisions that were nearly trapped in the American drive that captured Palermo had managed to withdraw eastward toward Messina. This made at least eight Axis divisions known to be still in the field in Sicily.

RAID AIRFIELDS

Meanwhile, Allied bombers heavily attacked south Italy's airfields, destroying 20 planes grounded at Sciacca airdrome and hammered at the Axis bridgehead in Sicily, centring on Milazzo, 20 miles west of Messina. Two airdromes near Naples, including Capua, were bombed and other planes battered Reggio Di Calabria, opposite Messina. Five Axis planes were destroyed and three Allied craft lost.

Despite difficult terrain, the Canadians drove back German forces trying vainly to save an escape bridgehead in eastern Sicily and captured a number of prisoners.

A headquarters communique said activity on the eastern sector of the Eighth Army front had fallen off to patrol action and that the American Seventh Army front on the left flank was static.

While the Eighth Army's coastal wing was held up temporarily by the stiffened German defences south of Mt. Etna, front line reports said German losses in that area were running as high as 50 per cent for some battalions.

laugh when Oliver Locker-Lampson asked whether Mussolini was in Eire (Ireland). There was no reply.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, assured the house that "any motive to exact an eye for an eye or a tooth for a tooth is entirely foreign to our thought."

Asked if he would agree that it would be impossible to avoid damage to ancient monuments when bombs were dropped from a height of 20,000 feet, Sinclair said, "We are only concerned with the bombing of important military targets."

"We cannot be prevented from bombing important military targets because, unfortunately, they happen to be close to beautiful monuments," Sinclair added.

AT OWN RISK

Sinclair said it had been made clear to the people of Germany, Italy and of all occupied territories that "The Allied nations intend to attack from the air all centres working for the Axis war machine," and that civilians remain in such centres at their own risk.

Asked what conditions would have to be fulfilled before Rome would be considered an open city, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden replied:

"If the Italian government approaches us in the matter we would consider the matter in the light of the circumstances then existing."

Observers Believe:

End of Hostilities for Italy May Come Within Next 8 or 10 Days

By HARRISON SALISBURY

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

LONDON, July 28.—Opinion rapidly is hardening among London observers—despite official caution against over-optimism—that Italy soon will be out of the war except for a facade of fighting which must continue during dickering over peace terms.

The feeling also is growing that the end of hostilities may come as suddenly as did the ouster of Benito Mussolini. The next eight or 10 days probably will tell the story. The time may depend upon operations in Sicily, especially at Catania where the Germans are concentrated.

DELAY REDUCES VALUE

On the other hand, it is obvious that each day of delay reduces the value of any offer the King of Italy or Premier Pietro Badgolio can make to the Allies. This new Italian regime has two things it can offer: Time and economy of effort.

Quick Italian capitulation would offer the Allies certain advantages. It would enable them to reach the Po river weeks or even months earlier than if they had to fight their way north. The Po valley is the industrial heart of Italy and has good air bases for bombing Germany.

It would save the Allies thousands of casualties and vast quantities of war materials. It would enable the Allies to set their time table ahead, possibly by two months, by releasing much shipping and many airplanes and troops for attacks elsewhere in Europe.

Additionally, if the Italian regime is stable, it would permit entry into Italy just as Allied forces entered North Africa and eliminate the need for Allied guards at every town and cross-road.

Heaviest Air Raid of War Hits Hamburg

MORE FLAK, LIGHTS

The Germans were reported reinforcing the defences of Hamburg as fast as possible. Last night the airmen ran into more searchlight beams and anti-aircraft fire than ever before. German night fighters at the same time risked being winged by their own ground barrage to engage the bombers over the target.

As the greatest air offensive of all time went through its fifth day, with Allied planes swarming ceaselessly against the continent, photographs of stricken Hamburg revealed that fires were raging in the dock area at noon Tuesday.

"There still was light to guide our bombers to Hamburg again last night," an official statement said, "but the great pall of smoke which had hung over the city for days had dispersed.

"New photographs amply confirmed the great extent and importance of the industrial damage."

MORE DESTRUCTIVE

Visibility was good last night and British airmen saw a huge warehouse near the docks ablaze. They were convinced that the new raid was even more destructive than that of Saturday night.

Smoke boiling up from the inferno that was Hamburg was dense up to 16,000 feet. One Wing Commander said he saw about three times the number of fires visible Saturday night.

"All were well concentrated," he said. "Smoke was rising up 21,000 feet from the docks."

Churchill Pays Newsmen Tribute

LONDON, July 28.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill paid a major tribute yesterday to the quality and accuracy of the war coverage by war correspondents as he addressed the House of Commons on the downfall of Benito Mussolini.

"Very complete, vivid and excellent accounts are appearing in newspapers of all operations," he said.

"An immense army of correspondents move with the troops and carry their cameras into the heat of fighting. An immense volume of material of the deepest interest and of a very high level of quality and accuracy fills the public press from hour to hour. And there is at present very little which I could add to this except, of course, to set matters in proportion and as I and my colleagues view them and to place the proper emphasis, or what we conceive with our fallible judgment to be the proper emphasis, upon the various facts and factors."

Plan Distribution Of Stook-Sweeps

Stook-sweeps will be made available to farmers very shortly, it has been announced, and arrangements have been made for a city firm to manufacture the kits of iron. Weight of the implement will be abut 325 pounds, and will be available for $50. They will be shipped to any station in Alberta by the Implement Parts Distributors, which is a government agency.

The labor shortage on the farm is expected to be considerably reduced through the use of the stook-sweep, which can be constructed by any farmer or blacksmith. To put it together, it is neecssary to have lumber, tractor wheels and the rear end of a car which will be used as a hoist.

Several blacksmiths in the province attended a course at Olds Agricultural College in May and June, and will be able to assist the farmer in putting the stook-sweep together.

Col. Ralston Arrives in U.K. For War Talks

LONDON, July 28.—(CP)—Col. J. A. Ralston, Canadian minister of national defence, has arrived in London, it was announced today.

The minister travelled from Canada by air, accompanied by Col. H. A. Dyde, his personal assistant who said they "had a very good trip."

Col. Ralston came to London by automobile from the airfield at which he landed, in company with Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of the Canadian general staff, who greeted the minister soon after the plane touched British soil.

PURPOSE NOT GIVEN

The purpose of the minister's visit was not announced, but it was taken for granted it was concerned with Canadian participation in the Sicilian invasion.

In Britain he will be able to get first-hand information from Canadian service chiefs of the part the Canadian 1st Division is playing in Sicily, for both Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian army overseas, and Gen. Stuart recently made a tour of that war theatre and saw the Canadian operations.

Canuck Troops And Newsmen Are Standing Up Well in Sicily

The following story is written for The Canadian Press by Peter Stursberg, war correspondent, who covered the Canadian landings and invasion of Sicily. Stursberg, 29-year-old native of Vancouver, is making a brief visit to Allied headquarters in North Africa, and will return shortly to the front.—EDITOR.

By PETER STURSBERG

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 28.—(CP)—Canadian troops are standing up well under their first prolonged battle in Sicily and so are the front line war correspondents.

Some of us were seasick early on the morning of July 10 when the sea off the Sicilian coast was so rough we didn't think landings would be possible. But we got ashore, saw troops in trucks kit move inland and during the day wrote out eyewitness stories of the start of the invasion of Europe.

As I headed down another dusty road on the third day ashore I saw a little group in an olive grove cooking a meal.

Lanky Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, was there, and so were Capt. Dave Maclellan, formerly of Halifax, Capt. Frank Royal of Winnipeg, and Lt. Al Fraser of Montreal, both Canadian army photographers. They had a jeep and I joined their party.

RODE ON MULES

When Munro and I went to see the capture of Enna, which sits atop a hill, we rode part way on mules.

The fight for Enna, from a correspondent's point of view, was perfect. We stood on one hill and watched artillery lay down a hotly-concentrated barrage on enemy positions on another hill. Then we saw infantry creep up to attack.

Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, the Canadian commander, came over and gave us an outline of the plan of attack as it proceeded.

We had our first bath in Sicily in a stream, a week after landing and had come to look like grey ghosts because of the dust. When we did bathe, so many others had used the stream for the same purpose it practically ran soap suds.

We had to write our copy in the evenings after scouting around in the daytime. Light was a problem because of the necessity for a complete blackout. On some occasions we typed by the light inside army signals trucks.

PART OF KIT LOST

I lost some of my kit during the first days and so did Munro. He lost his peaked service cap and mine in hat disappeared. He now wears my service cap and I a wedge which I brought along in case. He has agreed to buy me a brand new beret when we next go shopping in London.

Drought Harms Saskatchewan, Alberta Crops

OTTAWA, July 28.—(CP)—Weather conditions during the past week favored crop development across Canada except in Saskatchewan and Alberta where high temperatures without effective rainfall caused further deterioration of crop prospects, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported yesterday.

The bureau issued the fifth of a series of eight telegraphic reports covering crop conditions from coast to coast.

"In the prairie provinces crop prospects were well maintained in Manitoba despite light rainfall during the past week, but in Saskatchewan and Alberta further deterioration took place," the bureau reported.

MORE PUNISHMENT

"The drought area of southeastern Alberta which takes in most of crop districts 1, 3 and 5 took more punishment, while other areas which had shown good promise hitherto, now are reporting a setback to crops on stubble and the need of immediate rain to maintain prospects on fallow.

"In Saskatchewan, the best conditions continue to show in eastern sections of the province, but in the absence of rain during a week of high temperatures further deterioration over an extensive area was reported. Heavy downpours now are needed to revive wilting crops and assist in filling.

"Hail damage was severe in spots in all three provinces while insect damage, principally from grasshoppers and sawfly was noted in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Air Raid Wardens Charged as Spies

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—Two former Staten Island air raid wardens were indicted by a federal grand jury in Brooklyn yesterday on charges of having acted as German spies.

They were Erwin Harry de Spretter, 52, and Ernest Frederick Lehmitz, 57, both of whom had pleaded guilty before a U.S. commissioner to spy charges and were being held in $50,000 bail each.

The indictment charged 26 overt acts against the United States, most of them charges of writing letters in German with invisible ink. One count charged de Spretter with delivering a book on American aircraft to Lehmitz and receiving $100 in payment.

It charged the defendants and "certain co-conspirators" had served as "agents, representatives and employees of the German government," and participated in an international spy ring that operated in New York, Lisbon, Buenos Aires, Bilbao, Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen.

Despite Axis Attacks

Greatest Prisoner Convoy Arrives Safely in Britain

By HENRY B. JAMESON

A BRITISH PORT, July 28.—(AP)—The greatest mass movement of war prisoners ever undertaken by boat has been accomplished without a hitch, despite Axis efforts to sink the ships that were carrying their own soldiers, out of the Mediterranean war zone.

An Allied convoy transporting thousands of German and Italian prisoners from North Africa to Britain recently beat off both German submarine and air attacks on the way.

The targets, of course, were the big troopships, none of which were so much as scratched, but it gave the prisoners some moments of action they did not bargain for—being fired on by their own guns after they no longer were of any value to the war machine.

MANY THOUSANDS

The exact number of the captives was not disclosed, but there were "many thousands" of them. Some idea of the size of the convoy might be indicated by the fact that unloading required three days.

The Italians, with few exceptions, appeared cheerful, obviously pleased to be out of the war. Many of them were almost pitifully clad in weather-beaten, unmatched uniforms and misfit shoes.

All the Germans were much better dressed but their actions seemed to radiate the hatred that Nazism taught them to hold for the Allies.

They just glared into space like caged animals following orders.

Duce Remains Among Missing

A story from Madrid said travellers from Italy reported Il Duce was in a villa outside Rome.

German Armor Held Up 30 Hours By Paratroops

WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)—A United States parachute combat team, landing in Sicily in the darkness and going into action for the first time, held off a German armored division for 30 hours and blocked its attempt to drive to the sea between American beach landings, Maj.-Gen. Joseph M. Swing reported yesterday. He is commander of the 11th Airborne Division.

"It was the largest simultaneous airborne effort ever undertaken," he said. "We landed them by the thousands in Sicily, and we hope to land them by tens of thousands next time."

Armed with Bazookas, light 75-MM. Howitzers and 50-calibre machine guns as well as small arms, the paratroops came down about six miles inland and between the 1st and 45th Divisions, which were landing on the beaches at Gala and Scoglitti.

Even the huge 60-ton Mark VI German tanks were turned back by the Howitzers and Bazookas of the American paratroops, Swing reported.

He said that the men waited until the lumbering tanks were no more than 50 yards away before opening fire.

"We had youngsters crawling on their bellies up through the light brush toward approaching tanks, trying to fire through the splits in front with their rifles," he continued.

"Is that effective?" he was asked.

"If you hit the slit, it's effective, all right—there's a driver right behind the slit," Swing retorted.

Italian Collapse Blow to Germany

WINNIPEG, July 28.—(CP)—Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, British high commissioner to Canada, said in an interview here last night that the collapse of Fascist Italy would have a big morale effect on Germany. "The Germans must begin to feel this is the beginning of the end," he said.

Mussolini's resignation would have an excellent effect in cheering up inhabitants of all occupied countries in Europe and in making them feel that the United Nations were not only going to win the war but would do so within a reasonable period of time, he said. "It will increase resistance to the Germans in France and other occupied countries."

More important is the morale effect that the end of the Fascist regime will have in Germany.

They must feel that they haven't now the faintest chance of winning the war. All their hopes must have gone when they saw the collapse of Fascist Italy. Their depression will make them much more vulnerable to bombing from a morale point of view."

Mrs. Haines won the decree on her cross complaint.

Special Grants For Maternity Planned in Ont.

CHATHAM, Ont., July 28.—(CP)—Hon. A. St. Clair Gordon said in an address last night that a system of maternity allowances "is one of the first measures we should deal with" at the first session of the legislature after the Aug. 4 Ontario general election.

The provincial treasurer, who is seeking re-election in Kent West, added that "I promise that I will find the funds without new taxation for by careful management of the finances of the province. I will save in interest sufficient to make available to the mothers of the new generation maternity benefits on a generous scale."

LOWER PENSION AGE

Mr. Gordon stated his belief that old age pensions should start at the age of 65 instead of 70. He said that he would urge the government to make the necessary representations to the Dominion government in an effort to have this age limit adopted and would seek the support of the other eight provinces as well.

Mr. Gordon recalled that he recently met Hon. Frederick Jones, minister of national defence for New Zealand and discussed with him social security measures in that dominion.

Outstanding among these, he continued, was the system of maternity benefits which "in Canadian funds would probably run $30 to $40 per person." The birth rate in Ontario is slightly over 70,000 a year.

"It is my firm conviction that the New Zealand plan of maternity benefits possesses great merit and is one that should be adopted by the province of Ontario and made a part of our social service and health program," adding that he would urge on the government at the first session of the legislature after the election that this be done.

His letter, dated July 24 and made public yesterday, was in response to one from Mr. Duplessis in which the latter repeated his request that the prime minister communicate to the British government Quebec's protest against postponement of redistribution.

"Pals" Turned on Duce In Violent Oral Battle

By FRANK BRUTTO

BERNE, Switzerland, July 28.—(AP)—Benito Mussolini's former cronies of the Fascist Grand Council cut him down in a violent oral battle lasting into the hours of dark Sunday as the dictator struggled in vain to keep his hold, the newspaper Corriere Della Sera of Milan reported yesterday.

Italian Fascism, the paper declared, ended in "a farce in which the founders could no longer agree."

Even Carlo Scorza and Roberto Farinacci, Mussolini's chief subordinates, turned against him as a leader as they strove futilely to oppose the council majority assembled to "pronounce the end of the Fascist regime," it said.

The newspaper said Mussolini brought to the session a great collection of documents against his former friends and, opening the volume after the first acrid attack upon him, said: "I must read your dossiers."

Count Dino Grandi, former minister of foreign affairs and justice reacted violently. A wild discussion followed in which Scorza and Farinacci participated.

Thus, said the newspaper, ended the fight begun in 1921 between Mussolini and Grandi. It was in 1921 that Grandi violently attacked Mussolini's politics at a congress of the Fascist party in Rome.

Col. Drew Raps Policy on Food

TORONTO, July 28.—(CP)—Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative leader, said last night the federal government order freezing sale of canned fruit and vegetables in Canada provided "startling proof" of what he said was the provincial government's failure to maintain food production in Ontario farms.

Col. Drew, candidate in Toronto High Park for the Aug. 4 provincial election, told a public meeting in that riding the freezing order, announced Monday, is the result of "utter lack of planning" by provincial Premier Nixon and federal Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

Col. Drew said when Mr. Nixon opened his election campaign in London June 28, the main speaker was Mr. Gardiner.

"Mr. Gardiner ridiculed my statement that there was real danger of a food shortage in Canada," said Col. Drew, adding that the Progressive Conservative party demanded last February that the government take steps to assure manpower, machinery and stable prices."

Floor Farm Prices Pledged by Nixon

"Never again should small exportable surpluses be permitted to drive prices down."

The premier who said the Progressive Conservative farm policy was patterned on Britain's system, quoted Lord Beaverbrook, former British minister of aircraft production, as condemning the British system on the ground that "farmers had to spend half their time filling out forms instead of farming."

"Give the Indians a chance to say whether they want to retain their present status and there will be no doubt about the answer," Mr. Hamilton said. "The Indians will never get anywhere until they get the franchise."

The One Way Out

Secretary Cordell Hull at Washington and Prime Minister Churchill at London have served timely notice on all parties concerned that for Italy, as for Germany and Japan, there is only one exit from the arena. It is the gate of unconditional surrender. There are enough peculiar features about the proceedings at Rome to make such clear-cut pronouncements not only appropriate but necessary. And there has been enough vague language used by commentators in Allied countries, in predicting the probable course of events, to call for this plain assertion that the decision reached at Casablanca last January stands and is going to stand.

It may be that the juggling in the Italian capital means what it appears to mean. Or this may be only the "come on" sign that Hitler has planted another booby trap for the "decadent" democracies and their "idiot" leaders to fall into. In either case the straight-forward course is the only course of honesty and safety, and it is all to the good that the gentlemen on the stage are told they are only wasting their talents if the idea is to play on the "softness" of the democracies and gain either time or truce. If they want to get Italy out of the war let them say so. They know the pass-word.

Looking Ahead

Canned fruits and vegetables have been "frozen"—in the marketing sense of course, across the Dominion. The object, plainly stated in the official order, is to hold the remainder of last year's pack for winter use, for the reason that the new pack does not promise to be sufficient. Fresh fruits and vegetables being in season, the public are required to use these during the summer and fall. This most families were already doing where that was practicable. The general effect of the order is to translate this voluntary preference into a legal obligation, and do in a national way what individual families were doing of choice.

But the same conditions which cut down the prospect of a large new pack of these commodities make it impossible that fresh supplies should be available everywhere and to all consumers. The national fruit crop is away below normal, and the vegetable crop short of the demand. Fresh fruits and some classes of vegetables in Edmonton are simply beyond the reach of people of ordinary means. In many instances the canned varieties were cheaper, and these were being used unseasonably as a result. No sort of regulation can help such a situation in time of actual scarcity. All the freezing order can do is assure that some supplies will be available next winter, which might not be the case if the controller had not stepped in.

Something in the Wind?

The almost incessant pounding of Hamburg since Saturday, with destructive side-raids on Essen, Wilhelmshaven, Wessermunde, Hanover and Kiel, will signify something unusual to the official observers at Berlin. In three days more than 6,000 tons of bombs were hurled into these ports of entry at the mouths of the Elbe and the Wesser, and the supporting centres. That the area is being subjected to a "softening" process out of the ordinary will not escape attention at the Nazi headquarters. It lies between the Dutch border and the Danish peninsula, and is the straight road to Berlin from England.

That an invasion of Germany is intended there will naturally occur to Herr Hitler's watchmen. It would of course be attacking Germany where it is strong, but there are offsetting advantages. An invasion there would cut Germany off from Holland, Belgium, France and the Ruhr, leaving the Nazi forces in these areas the choice of scuttling for home or risking isolation like their comrades in Sicily. The enemy in Denmark and Norway would likewise be flanked, and a direct advance upon Berlin would hinge only on the strength of the invading army.

Perhaps the Allied High Command has no intention of sending an expeditionary force to this heavily bombed coastal area. But the enemy cannot afford to gamble that it won't. If the incessant bombing is only a bluff it is a good one.

Echoes of the Fray

The news coming out of Italy is double-screened. It must filter through a tight-woven censorship enforced by martial law, and then is relayed by correspondents in neutral countries who may or may not be good judges of its authenticity. It is safe to assume in these circumstances that the outside world is hearing little more than Badoglio or the Fascists want it to hear. Neither of them is likely to send or permit the kind of news the Allies would like to hear. Whether the new Premier and the faction are in a clinch or in collusion, it is to the interest of neither to tell the world that Italy is in a state of turmoil and the populace clamoring for peace.

Such scraps of information as do get through direct confirm the reports in Italian newspapers which are smuggled across the border as to the state of public feeling. Parades and peace demonstrations are apparently the order of the day, despite martial law, and even clashes between German and Italian soldiers are reported. The situation thus presented is one of a country verging upon open revolt, where any hour authority may be defied and chaos reign.

It is to be hoped the Italian people will not have to go through that added agony, but it seems fairly clear that they have no intention of fighting either for Germany or against the Allies, whatever Badoglio may want them to do. If the new premier was candid in saying he would continue the war, the trickle of news from Italy shows that he is liable to have more war on hand than he was counting on.

Fifty million dollars in French gold sent to Martinique when France fell has been turned over to the Fighting French committee. Laval will be furious about it, but he has little cause to be. The transfer will not put him in wrong with Hitler, he being already as far in the Fuehrer's bad grace as he could be.

Moscow says Russian troops have cut the railroad running back from Orel to Bryansk and brought the parallel highway under fire. If they can hold that life-line to the rear, the Nazi garrison in Orel has small chance of escape and the city may be captured speedily. As there is no sign of the Russian offensive weakening, the probability is that what the Reds have they can hold.

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell is asking provincial authorities to help him work out a plan by which soldiers can help in the harvest without getting out of touch with their officers and units. The idea is that soldiers be sent to designated farms, where they would work under army regulations and discipline, and on returning to camp would be given the additional money they earned over and above their army pay. If it is practicable, there seems little doubt that many soldiers would welcome the chance to get into the fields for a while and earn some extra money.

Two more Swedish vessels have sailed from Canada with cargoes of wheat for Greece, while four others are loading. Several cargoes have been delivered during the past year. Evidently the occupation officials are not interfering with the distribution, else there would be no object in sending more. The officials are mainly Italian, and they are far enough from Il Duce to act as Italian officials used to act in the pre-Fascist days.

Who Will Be Next in General Axis Collapse?

Other Axis Satellites May Follow Action of the Duce

By HAROLD L. WEIR

Like so many other events in this war, the fall of Mussolini and his fascist party is less significant in itself than in what it portends.

It is obvious, of course, the occurrence should move Italy closer, in a general way, to surrender and should therefore advance the date of the end of the war.

Harold L. Weir

But the ramifications of the collapse extend far beyond the borders of Italy. And that is the part of the event which offers the most interesting study.

How is this new development going to affect the German people? How is it going to affect the Nazi party? How is it going to affect the many satellite nations which Hitler has brought, by force of arms and by threats, under his control?

Pattern

While the German people are characteristically unlike the Italian people and while there are many factors in the Nazi establishment that did not exist in Mussolini's system, it seems to me to be a fair assumption that the collapse of Hitler's power in Germany will follow the general pattern of the collapse of Mussolini's power in Italy.

It is true that the Gestapo is a unique institution and exercises a control over German public opinion and German behavior that had no real counterpart in Italy. It is true that the Gestapo, with its death grip on the life of every German, might postpone the death of nazism unduly. In short, it is conceivable that nazism might be dead for months and still be propped up into a semblance of life by the rigid censorship and discipline of Gestapo agents.

This situation did not prevail in Italy, or, at least, not to the same extent it prevails in Germany.

But the general likeness is there. Nazism appeals to the same human emotions as fascism. That is to say, they are both based on greed and selfishness.

We have seen that when fascism was no longer able to feed the greed and selfishness of Italians, fascism simply disappeared. When nazism is no longer able to satisfy the greed and selfishness of Germans, it too will disappear.

The chronology and coloring of the two debacles may be widely different. But, looking at Italy today, we are at least justified in saying, in a broad fashion, "That's the way it will happen in Germany."

Along in the 1920's when William Randolph Hearst's Mr. Opper used to draw cartoons exploiting the financial magnanimity of Uncle Sam and the sly mendicancy of John Bull, there used to appear in the corner of the pictures a group of little ragged nondescript figures which Mr. Opper would elegantly label the "small busted nations."

This, of course, in Opper's application, was a gross libel.

But the designation seems to fit, with grim exactitude, the group of bandit nations Hitler has attracted to his banner. They are, indeed, the "small busted nations", the European tramps.

There are many splendid Hungarians, Rumanians, Bulgarians and Finns. Indeed, the peoples of those countries have never deserved the rattletrap kinds of government that have been inflicted upon them. Nor can we doubt that Hungary, for instance, received a pretty shabby deal after the last war.

But the governments of these countries have always been tramps. They have been ramshackle, iniquitous and graft-ridden affairs.

They flocked to Hitler, in the first place, because they had the idea that Hitler, the master bandit, would turn them loose to loot Europe.

What are they going to do now that they know that Hitler is on the road to defeat? What are they going to do now that they see the fate that has befallen the fat, howling faker of Rome whom their tinpot leaders took as their pattern and beau ideal?

It may not happen this month, it may not happen this year, but sooner or later all these tramp nations, whose national purpose is purely loot, will fade out of the picture as Italy is doing.

Totalitarianism simply does not stand up under the heavy going. And the totalitarianism of these people will fold up when they are perfectly convinced, as the Italian fascists are convinced, that the bandit business no longer pays dividends.

Who, then, will be next?

Bulgaria has never co-operated very heavily with Hitler, not because her leaders did not want to, but because they were afraid to push her people too far in the face of their sentimental association with the Russians.

It might be a fair guess, then, that when the shooting starts in the Balkans, as it inevitably will, the Bulgarians will find a quick way to back out of the picture.

The Rumanians and Hungarians, too, are weary of being bedevilled by the demands of Hitler for cannon-fodder. They are weary of the empty pretensions of their leaders who have promised much and delivered nothing.

I think it is reasonable to look for signs of collapse in all these countries. There seems to be no doubt that the entire Axis is in process of very definite decline.

"All Accountants"

FROM THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

We had known that someone or other had called Britain a nation of bookkeepers, but it was not until we read a London despatch the other day that we realized it was against the law in Britain not to be a bookkeeper.

A cafe owner, was fined $48 because he kept track of his coffee and tea rationing by dropping peas in a pot instead of making proper bookkeeping entries. Perhaps had he used an abacus, as do our Allies, the Chinese, he might have been forgiven, but the old puzzle of counting the peas in the jar was too much for British jurisprudence.

But we need not turn up our noses at the British. Just wait until Sept. 15 when all of us will have to file returns on our estimated 1943 income—particularly those cases where "husband and wife together had in '42 or expect to have in '43, more than $100 income not subject to withholding, like dividends, profits, etc., and subject to minor exceptions, had total income of more than $1,200 in '42, or expects to have more than $624 this year" in which case the taxpayer must deduct from his estimated income his estimated deductions of withholding tax, plus his two 1942 installments, plus Victory tax, and pay the derived tax in two installments except in case his estimate was too high or too low, in which case he may file a new estimate Dec. 15 and pay on that basis.

We'd rather not go into what happens next March 15, when we pay one half of the first quarterly tax on 1942 income, plus tax on 1943 income not already paid, plus one-fourth of the estimated tax on 1944 that will not be deducted from our pay, because we haven't figured out yet if our total tax on 1942 income was less than [illegible] income and Victory taxes on [illegible] income, and was more than $5[illegible] but still less than our total tax on 1943 income, in which case we are allowed to knock out three fourths of it or $50, whichever is more.

A nation of bookkeepers! We are going to be a nation of certified public accountants—that is, those of us still able to meet the public after March 15, for we fear most of use may be rattling the iron bars in some place of incarceration, demanding a jar of Mr. Francis's peas with which to do some calculating.

Pay Tribute to British Planes

Our Aviators Fly With Dash and Efficiency In Sicily

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

ALLIED COMMAND POST, NORTH AFRICA—I happen to be seeing more of the American Air Force than of the R.A.F., which is the reason I have been writing almost entirely about the American part in the spectacular air history being made in Sicily. But the British part is enormous as it has been in the air war over Germany—indeed, as it has been beginning with the Battle of Britain which was one of the decisive battles of the world.

Raymond Clapper

The British have remarkable planes, and what is more they risk them with bold persistence as the losses in bombing over Germany indicates. The British gathered large numbers of the little Spitfires at Malta to play their part in forming the air cover for the invasion of Sicily.

British bombers doing heavy night work in Sicily are carrying on around-the-clock pounding which the American planes are giving Sicily in daylight hours.

The fact that we are now operating fighters from fields in Sicily marks the beginning of the end of the campaign. The Axis is compelled to withdraw fighters. We will continue to push our fighter cover onward and that will be the key to further Allied advances. A fighter cover is necessary if we are to protect our troops from merciless slaughter. Swarms of British Spitfires are most essential in that.

America has developed several notable airplanes, and for the special purposes intended nothing equals the Flying Fortress, the lightning P-38 which probably is the most versatile plane in the air, and the A-36 light fighter-bomber which has developed a deadly dive-bombing ability. Yet at the two extremes, in the light Spitfire and in the heavy box car bomber like the Lancaster, the British have no equals.

The two air forces make a well-rounded team. Moreover the two forces are pulling together as a team. The working association which existed in England between Air Marshal Harris and General Eaker is found here also between Air Marshal Tedder and General Spaatz.

The British and American air forces are mixed up as one service over here as indeed is General Eisenhower's whole command. You just don't find either here or in England that back-biting muttering about each other that I found a year or so ago in some other parts of the world. Here, as in England, the Allied forces are one and nowhere is that more easily seen than in the air.

This makes a campaign such as the one in Sicily more deadly as it works up to a crescendo. The activity is more intense even than in the days just preceding the invasion. At one airfield I saw American fighters taking off while the preceding mission was still out. Fighters just in were quickly interrogated and some of them called out at once for briefing for the next trip.

This field has been running missions every hour on the hour. During the last six days 600 sorties were carried out from this field, a sortie being the trip of one plane over enemy territory. Out of the 600 plane trips only six planes were lost. And that is only one field. There are dozens of others from which the Americans and British blast hourly at Sicily.

Those Berlin specialists in air warfare must be studying this show in Sicily with worried brows. They must know we are just warming up on this one end.

Dressmaking the Hard Way

Many Years Ago One Pattern Had to Do All Sizes

By MARY ALICE QUAYNE

The dressmaker today who sighs because of the complicated patterns and the Consumer's Branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Boards' order for narrower skirts and less trimming, should hark back to the day even 25 years ago and be thankful.

Patterns are practically self-performing as compared with 40 years ago.

A friend was showing a pattern which was used by her grandmother. This pattern was used to make the clothes for all faminine members of the family from the youngest to the oldest.

The Cornwell's Self-Styling System of Dresscutting, which was patented in 1876, was the pattern for the bodice and sleeves of a dress. Everything from infant's size to size 46 could be drafted from this one pattern. This was done by merely putting the pattern on a piece of paper and drawing to the dots indicated in the pattern. This pattern was then cut from cambric and fitted.

If the cambric pattern fit, then the pattern was laid on the dress material to be used, and the cambric was used as the lining of the dress, for all dresses of any importance boasted linings. That is another old fashion that we moderns should be more than glad to have discarded.

Real Designers

My friend tells me that her grandmother was remarkably clever about designing bodice variations to suit the styles of the day.

There was no pattern for the skirts. These were improvised with paper, then cut out of cambric and draped and measured. Even the skirts were completely lined. After the skirt was made, then came the braids which were used to protect the edges of the skirt from the rigors of sidewalks, which were mostly wooden as cement was not common. This braid had to be replaced several times during the life of a skirt.

The patented pattern was accompanied by a small book of instructions with fascinating style hints. One picked at random tells how to cut "Garibaldis." This style required the addition of two sizes to the bust measure in Row F in front chart and Row R in back chart. On further reading I discovered that "Garibaldis" must be equivalent to a gathered waist of these days.

After looking through an old copy of Harper's Bazaar of 1880, you can easily see that one did dressmaking the hard way. Clothes closets of 64 years ago must have been of ample proportions to take care of the dresses because of the large amount of material used. Then it is no wonder that those dear ladies had very few costumes when you consider the amount of workmanship and the 10 to 15 yards of material needed for each.

Bathing Costumes

The fashion notes on bathing costumes are priceless. "The bathing suits most used this summer are cut on the same principle as the princesse underclothing, with one continuous garment that envelopes the entire figure, to which is added a skirt that drapes and conceals the limbs." It is no small wonder that the women in the summer of 1880 only waded!

It would be interesting to know if such costumes caused many drownings. Even the men's bathing suits must have retarded swimming activities. Their bathing suits look comparable in weight to a soldier in fatigue uniform carrying light provisions and his rifle.

Crochet Popular

There are a number of crocheted fascinators pictured in that old magazine. In case you don't know what a fascinator is, it is that fetching little string-crocheted affair that the girls are now draping over part of their hair, over their shoulders and under the chin. It is consoling to know that this innovation can't be blamed on the stylists today, but we can blame them for resurrecting it!

Knitted lace was very popular then for coverlets, edging of pillow cases and sheets and, of course, for petticoats and chemise.

Needlework was of many types and monograms were of the most intricate and "curlicue" variety. Drawn-work was especially popular for summer handiwork with Holbeing work and Vienna cross-stitch used extensively for such things as edging on linen towels and table-covers.

The 1943 fashion-conscious woman should be most thankful that the collar styles of 1880 haven't been revived. The collars and fischus were of such ample proportions as to be usable as chest protectors. They were frilly no end and they made me wonder about the problem of laundry.

All in all, the woman of today can glory in the freedom of below-knee length dresses, and these require about a third the amount of material and about one-twentieth the amount of work.

Fourth War Session Closes

Nature of Government Changes As Conflict Continues

By B. T. RICHARDSON

OTTAWA—Except for the short session of parliament to declare war in September, 1939, the session just adjourned is the fourth under war conditions, and it marks many significant milestones both on the war and the home fronts. The new dimensions of a new Canada are discernible in the records debated by parliament, records of industrial and military mobilization.

When the session started on January 28, 1943, the Speech from the Throne remarked that the tide of Axis expansion had been halted. Now, six months later, that tide has been rolled back on many fronts, and the flow of war news has for some weeks acquired the coloring of optimism to a degree that would have been unbelievable in January. The share that Canada has taken in rolling back the Axis tide, of course, was determined by policies framed in previous sessions and implemented before this year. The 1943 session, influenced by the drift of events, has debated post-war aspects of war policy more explicitly than ever before. Like a great fever that rages until the climax is reached, the disease of war has swept quickly and intensively to its crisis. The task of marshalling plans for the patient's recuperation is starting, though obviously there is plenty of room for bad news yet.

"In the course of the present war," said Prime Minister King on July 1, "we have seen Canada emerge from nationhood into a position generally recognized as that of a world power." A leading opposition spokesman on foreign policy was Howard Green, who said, "We are at a turning point in the history of this country. Either we go on from here and become a real world power, or we develop a small-nation complex; and now is the time to place before the Canadian people a vision of what this wonderful nation of ours can be."

Nearly half the time of parliament was spent on war appropriations and, if the budget debate and the debate on mutual aid were included, much more than half the time of parliament was spent on the economic and financial side of war. The budget provided $3,890,000,000 for war, $610,000,000 for ordinary costs, and mutual aid act provided $1,000,000,000 to finance aid for allied countries. The sum of nearly $5,000,000,000 for war and mutual aid so far exceeds previous sums considered by the Canadian parliament that no precedent exists. It repersents as much as all productive values in Canada a few years ago. There can be no doubt that, if in fact this sum is expended by March 31, 1944, it will represent at least half, possibly more, of the entire Canadian national income.

To observers, the session lacked political fire. Coming federal by-elections and coming provincial elections cast some shade on the session in its later stages. As house leader of the opposition, Gordon Graydon received high marks from press gallery observers. It was his first session in that office. The absence of John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, was a contributing factor to the lull in contentious politics. The initiative in criticism was shared largely between Mr. Graydon and Mr. Coldwell. The normal expectation of this parliament is one more session and slightly more than one year of life. It was inevitable that political speculation should begin to consider when the next election will come, and under what circumstances.

War policies of the government came under fire on three major aspects. The first was manpower. On the one hand, the spring farming operations were completed despite labor shortage; on the other, serious shortages persisted in essential production requiring able-bodied men. Few in Ottawa expect anything but persisting difficulties in adjusting manpower supply to requirements in the months ahead.

As a sign of the times, the records of parliament during this session have contained more criticism of and opposition to high taxation, wage control and price control than previous sessions. Several members complained the weight of war costs was heavier on the Canadian people than on the people of allied nations, but this criticism did not recur. An attack on wage ceiling policy coincided with strikes for higher wages in industry. On the price control front, though, a considerable number of exemptions from the price ceiling have been allowed, demands were heard for greater incentives to the production of agricultural products. The standing committee on agriculture, for instance, on July 20, asked that, "in paying bonuses or fixing prices for agricultural products, more consideration should be given to the cost of production."

The wartime economic controls, it is plain, are under severe pressure and will continue to be. But the prevailing viewpoint of parliament, if it may be put in a few words, has been that hard and savage fighting is still to come. The Canadians have just begun to fight. The United Nations have begun to win on the home front, these milestones of war have begun to change the character of policy and problems. A definite change has come in war production, since initial requirements of the armed forces have been filled. The prospects of farm and food requirements have steadily broadened. There is more concern over filling manpower requirements of army and air force than ever.

Province Ready to Start Free Hospitalization for Recommended Cancer Cases

Starting Aug. 1, free hospitalization is to be provided by the province of Alberta for all cancer cases sent to hospital by provincial cancer clinics, Premier Ernest Manning said in an address here Monday. Such cases will be hospitalized free for the period necessary to complete a diagnosis, the premier added.

Mr. Manning's address was the fourth in a series on Alberta affairs, and it was based on activities of the provincial department of health, of which Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross is minister.

"The citizens of Alberta have a right to be proud of the fact that they have the most progressive and active public health department of any province in Canada. Under the able administration of Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, great strides forward in this important field have already been made in the few short years your present government has been administering your affairs," Mr. Manning declared.

REVIEWS UNITS

He reviewed activities of the rural health units, tuberculosis control, cancer control, district nursing, and poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) treatment.

His complete address follows:

I want to give you a resume of the important work which is being carried on by a department of government in which every citizen of this province is rightfully interested.

I refer to the department of public health. There is no matter which more vitally concerns the good and welfare of all the people than the preservation of health and the care and treatment of those afflicted with illness or disease.

EARNEST ENDEAVOR

It is therefore but right and natural that in our earnest endeavor to give the people of Alberta the results they want from the administration of their affairs we should place particular emphasis on the services provided through and rendered by the department of public health.

The citizens of Alberta have a right to be proud of the fact that they have the most progressive and active health department of any province in Canada. Under the able administration of the Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, great strides forward in this important field have already been made in the few short years your present government has been administering your affairs. The progressive public health program for the future which the department has already charted and is putting into operation as rapidly as possible assures the citizens of Alberta of even greater benefits in the days to come. Now before giving you a brief outline of the department's work and future plans may I take a moment to thank all those individuals and groups who have taken the time to write in expressing their views regarding the matters which we have discussed thus far in this series of talks on provincial affairs.

WANTS INFORMATION

Remember we want you to keep us informed. We want your views and your suggestions. Only thus can we shape and reshape the policies of government to give you the results you want.

The prevention of disease and the promotion of basic health services are the chief concern of any properly functioning department of health. In the past by far the greater percentage of the annual expenditure of all public health departments has been applied to the care of the physically and mentally ill, while only a very small percentage has been spent on the prevention of illness. It is the policy and determination of the Alberta health department to find ways and means to divert an ever increasing percentage to preventive work so that less will have to be expended on treatment. In other words we believe that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. This has been amply demonstrated in many fields of public health endeavor, and it is an accepted fact that money spent on the prevention of disease is a sound investment.

BEST ILLUSTRATIONS

Rural health districts, commonly known as health units, are one of the best illustrations of the soundness of this principle. The improvement of health conditions in rural districts in recent times has not kept pace with that in urban centres, and for many years the cities have been much the healthiest places in which to live.

In Alberta, for instance, the infantile death rate over a span of years in rural areas has varied from 40 to 60 per cent higher than that of the larger cities. This fact was due to the lack of health services in rural areas, and it has been amply demonstrated that this condition can be remedied in a few years by the services offered by the rural health units. In some of our rural health units the infantile death rate is now lower than that of the cities.

There are nine rural health units in Alberta, seven of which have been established by your present government. They cover an area of approximately 14,500 square miles and serve approximately 150,000 people, 30,000 of whom are of school age. It is the intention of the department to extend this service over the whole province as soon as possible after the war when we are in a position to go forward with our post-war public health program.

The prevention and treatment of tuberculosis is another activity which insures lower mortality and death rates. The countries that have paid the most attention to the discovery of early cases of tuberculosis and have made provision for treatment, particularly of early cases, consistently show the lowest death rates, and conversely the countries most neglecting these services show the highest death rates. Great Britain offers an outstanding illustration of this principle. In the early years of the war Great Britain closed many of her sanatoria and otherwise reduced tuberculosis services, with the result that there was a great flare-up of tuberculosis. During recent months the policy has been reversed and services have been greatly increased, in the hope that the situation may be brought under control.

EXPAND PROGRAM

Although Alberta entered the field of tuberculosis control in 1919 with the establishment of the Central Alberta Sanatorium, and the inauguration of clinics in 1925, it was not till 1936, following the election of your present government, that a program commensurate with the needs of the situation was adopted. In that year the Tuberculosis Act provided for institutional treatment for infectious types of the disease, and free treatment was offered to all persons who had resided in the province for twelve consecutive months out of the twenty-four months immediately preceding admission into any provincial sanatorium. Clinic services were also greatly increased under the provisions of this act. Bed capacity has been increased from 270 in 1935 to 415, and the total clinic examinations from 1,000 in 1935 to approximately 10,000 annually. The clinic examinations in 1941 resulted in the discovery of 564 new cases of tuberculosis whereas only 121 were discovered in 1935. Tuberculosis cannot be controlled unless cases are discovered early and placed under proper treatment. It can be controlled if people will co-operate in aiding its discovery in its early stages.

Although cancer is not a communicable disease, and in other respects presents different problems, the principle of early detection and prompt treatment applies just as in tuberculosis. It has been stated by competent authorities that by early recognition and prompt treatment of cancer the death rate can be cut in two.

FREE EXAMINATION

Acting on this principle the provincial department of health established two clinics in 1941 for free examination and early treatment of cases presenting themselves on the advice of their family physician. The Edmonton clinic is held in the Provincial Building every Tuesday forenoon and the clinic in Calgary is conducted at the Holy Cross Hospital every Friday afternoon. It should be remembered by all interested that patients are examined at the cancer clinics who are referred there by the family physician.

In 1941, 1142 examinations were made at the clinics, and in 1942, 1186. In addition there were 869 follow-up examinations in 1942.

All examinations and treatments given by the clinics are free, which includes a complete diagnosis, x-ray, radium and surgical services. Starting Aug. 1, free hospitalization will be provided for all cases of cancer sent to hospital by the clinics for the period necessary to complete the diagnosis.

Several points of great interest arise from the statistics and observations made by the director of cancer services. Perhaps the most important of these is that only approximately 50 per cent of those presenting themselves for examination have cancer. It has been observed that cases have had symptoms for from six months to two years. The director states that this is altogether too long, and asks, "Why take a needless chance with your life?" It has been observed that in cases of cancer of the skin, lip and breast, patients are coming earlier, but that there is no noticeable improvement in other types of cases. It has further been established that many cases that are diagnosed and treated early are cured easily and quickly.

The cure by surgery, X-ray and radium is not a long drawn out affair as in many other diseases. The recovery is usually quick and the patients are able to resume their regular daily life.

SPECIAL SERVICE

Another special health service of interest in Alberta is district nursing. The first district nurses were appointed in 1919, and the service has been gradually increased till there are now 34 such nurses, and it is the purpose of the department to add to this number.

District nursing stations are established in remote parts of the province, where the people are far removed from hospital, medical and dental services. A district nurse is often required, in the course of her duties, to assume the role of doctor, dentist, dispenser, bedside nurse and any other role the occasion may require. Her chief duties, however, have always been maternity and first aid work. In more recent years a great deal of immunization and educational work have been done by these nurses.

Under the Poliomyelitis Sufferers Act, which went into force in 1938, free treatment is provided for patients suffering from paralysis due to poliomyelitis and certified by the attending physician and an orthopaedic specialist as likely to benefit from treatment in hospitals equipped to provide the special type of treatment indicated in these cases. Under this act authority is also given to provide vocational training and academic instruction for children whose parents are not able to finance such training. The aim is to provide such assistance as will enable such persons to become self-supporting as far as possible. Each year from 12 to 20 such children are given this assistance.

DIFFICULT CONDITIONS

Health services in Alberta, as in other provinces now, are being carried on under many difficulties owing to war conditions. Of the nine health units five now receive only part-time medical supervision, the medical officers of health of four units having enlisted for war service. Nothwithstanding the difficulties, strenuous efforts are being made to provide all vital services and to maintain a high standard of service.

For detailed information concerning any or all of these public health services, those interested should write direct to the department of public health, Administration Building, Edmonton.

In closing this brief summary of the work of the department of public health I want to emphasibe that apart from the temporary difficulties resulting from wartime conditions the greatest, in fact the only major obstacle preventing the people of any province from having complete and adequate preventative and remedial health services is the unnecessary and therefore criminal shortage of money.

MANY DELAY

This is true in the case of both the individual and the state. Thousands of individuals go without medical care or delay obtaining medical attention until it is too late, for no other reason than the tragic fact that they haven't enough man-made money to enable them to afford it. The state faces the same deplorable problem when it desires and endeavors to provide adequate health services. There is never enough money to go the whole way and do the job as it ought to be done for the simple reason that under the existing financial system even sovereign states are permitted to obtain money only by taxing it from the people who already have insufficient to provide for themselves or else by borrowing it from the financial combine at the price of mortgaging the future as well as the present to the money lenders.

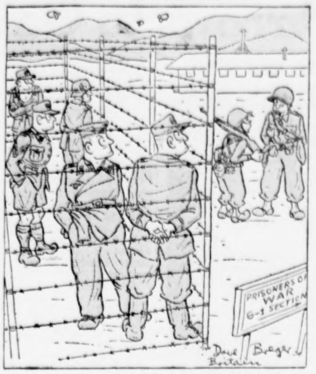

How anyone can consider even casually the tragic consequences of the present monetary system in the field of private and public health services and still remain indifferent to the imperative need of monetary reform is a mystery to me.

Under a properly functioning monetary system money would be the ever available servant of the people instead of a commodity by the control and manipulation of which a few can deprive the many of economic security and make it impossible for them to obtain even those services essential to the preservation of life.

PROPER SYSTEM

Under a proper monetary system the creation and regulation of all money and credit would be under the effective control of the people themselves through their democratically elected representatives and would be made available to them in sufficient quantity to enable them to enjoy a standard of living limited only by their ability to produce the things they require and to render the services necessary to their own good and welfare, all of which could be accomplished without the incurring of debt or the imposition of harsh taxation and without state regimentation or bureaucracy. That is why that your Social Credit government is determined to fight on unrelentingly to win for the people of this province and country the sovereign right to issue and control their own money and credit to the end that they may enjoy the full measure of economic security and freedom which rightfully are theirs; and to the end that man-made financial restrictions will no longer prevent any person from having access to the best and most scientific methods of preventing and treating all forms of disease. Meanwhile we will expand our efforts to give you the best public services possible under the unwarranted restrictions of the existing financial monopoly.

Five Game Act Changes Made For Northwest

OTTAWA, July 28—(CP)—Five changes in the North-West game regulations have been made by the Dominion government and now are in effect, the department of mines and resources announced yesterday.

The changes:

1—A complete closed season for marten is established because of a progressive decline in the numbers of this fur-bearer in recent years.

2—Number of beaver that the holder of a beaver permit may take in one year is reduced from 15 to 10 in that part of the North West Territories south of Liard River, Great Slave Lake, Thelon game sanctuary and Chesterfield Inlet;

SEASON FOR FOX

3—Seasons for trapping all foxes, colored and white, in the North West Territories now are as follows: North of the Arctic Circle, Nov. 1 to March 31; south of the Arctic Circle, Nov. 1 to end of February.

4—The season for hunting ptarmigan or "white partridge" will be from Sept. 1 to April 30 of the following year, with no change in the open season for other kinds of partridge or grouse;

5—Barren groundbear and grizzly bear are accorded an annual closed season during June, July and August.

PORCELAIN UNCHANGED

Affluent European householders of the 16th century used porcelain stoves 10 to 12 feet high, colorfully decorated with painted designs and luminous stones. During the past four centuries, the shape of stoves has changed radically, but porcelain finish is the same as that of the old stove.

Exultation Runs Wild
Sicilians Cry "Death to Duce" When Told Dictator Ousted

By ROSS MUNRO

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY, July 26.—(Delayed)—(CP)—In this front-line town, poverty-stricken Italian citizens received the news of Mussolini's resignation as Italian leader with shouts of "Bravo, bravo." Their exultation ran wild in a riot of joy.

They grabbed the hands of myself and a Canadian soldier, shak them like triphammers, patted us on the back and cried out in a flood of Italian "Down with Mussolini, death to the Duce."

The citizens milled around the main street, with the hulk of a destroyed German tank still at one corner, gesticulating wildly, laughing and shouting. It was one of the most unexpected spontaneous scenes I have ever witnessed.

INTERPRETER HANDY

Early in the morning Canadian war correspondents heard the news over the B.B.C. and headed for the town. I found Sigmn. Frank Sisco of Cochrane, Ont., who speaks Italian fluently. He came along as an interpreter to find out what the local Italians thought of the momentous announcement.

With Sisco, I stopped on the main street, which had been the centre of bloody fighting for the town a short time before as the Canadians assaulted the place.

We walked up to a group of Italian civilians and Sisco asked them if they had heard the news. They hadn't.

Then he told them of Mussolini's resignation. The group of 20 crowded around us, shouted together, "Bravo, Bravo," and clapped their hands.

I had seen civilians in every town we had occupied in Sicily give the troops the "V" sign in the march from the coast and sometimes cheer the invaders. But this was something I hoped I might see some day but never really expected — a group of people in a Fascist country expressing whole-hearted relief at the collapse of their dictator and the chance they see ahead for freedom.

Sisco and I made our way through the crowd and told another group standing beside the wrecked Nazi tank about the good news. There was an immediate outburst of joy and Sisco was nearly mobbed. He was hugged by one husky fellow and walloped on the back as if he were a newly-elected party leader.

TEAR DOWN POSTERS

Overjoyed Sicilians vented their hatred of their Fascist overlords by tearing down Italian propaganda posters featuring big-jawed virile-looking pictures of Mussolini. They threw rocks at Fascist emblems. One old man reached up to disfigure a painting of Mussolini's head on the wall of a building.

For the first time in Sicily I saw really happy Italians. Sad-eyed old women smiled and young girls who had been hiding in the cellars came into the streets, their eyes sparkling with joy.

Carabiniere police officers pleaded with me to drink some wine with them. We saw tattered, bewildered people, starved and exploited for years, breathe new hope of freedom and liberty in our scanty information about the Duce's downfall.

TAXED TO HILT

The shadows of 21 years' existence under Fascism drifted away. They told me through Sisco how they had been taxed to the hilt, reduced to dire poverty and forced to fight while the Fascist group at the top indulged in Roman luxury in Sicilian country mansions.

I had seen this during the advance into the island—mansions that would do credit to millionaires with peasants living in squalor near them. One big house south of Vizzini was used as a German officers' mess. I walked through its upstairs rooms—as splendid as any king would occupy.

There were fine Italian linens on the tables and beds, excellent crystal glass, pictures, chinaware, cutlery and furniture, and on the next storey down there were serfs living with chickens and guinea pigs in stinking filth.

One correspondent remarked "What a fraud this Fascism is in Sicily." I couldn't improve on that.

America's Card Authority

I often wonder why some card designer does not employ an idea used in the 18th century. This design had clubs representing Africa, spades, Asia, hearts, Europe, and diamonds, America. The cards of each suit were jammed with information on climate, area, population, commerce, history and culture. The jacks described islands surrounding the continents. The kings gave information on the governments of their various states and colonies.

The player holding the East hand shown today, who kept re-opening the bidding, could do with a little education on the subject of not pushing the opponents into a game. It took a nice end-play, however, to make the hand.

East won the opening lead with the jack of clubs and exited with a spade. South pulled the trumps, cashed the ace of hearts and put East in with a heart. This end-play gave the declarer the needed trick. (Yes, West should have opened a diamond.)

Murder Charged After Skeleton Is Found in Cellar

MONTREAL, July 28.—(CP)—A coroner's jury late yesterday held Luigi Stabile, 60-year-old farmer and father of 12 children, criminally responsible for the death of his brother-in-law, Carmenio Festa, 27 years ago at nearby St. Hubert.

Police took Stabile into custody after the verdict on a murder charge and said he would be arraigned Wednesday.

The jury's verdict came as an outcome of a week of investigation into the discovery of a skeleton in the cellar of a home at St. Hubert.

The discovery was made by Romeo Jacques, a farmhand, while he was digging in the cellar of the farm house.

The Bulletin's SPORT SHOW by Hal Dean

SPORTS EDITOR

THE Yanks emerged from Renfrew Park with their ninth win of the season Tuesday night simply because they played smarter ball than the Arrows. They got better pitching, made more hits and banged them out when and where they counted most.

Morris Hawkey has of course been the Arrows' work horse. He pitched last Thursday and it was clearly evident early in last night's game that he was not right, although it usually does take the Barrhead ace a couple of frames to get worked in.

Had Hawkey won it would have been his fifth straight, and his third in a row over the Yanks. He started out the season by downing the Dodgers twice and then lost out to Hornets on June 15. Successive victories over the Yanks followed on June 15 and 29 and he got back at the Hornets on July 11, beating the Dodgers again on July 22. However six and two still look okay.

YANKS USE SIX PITCHERS

YANKS have used six pitchers in gaining their nine league wins. John Gray, Harry Baldwin and Jerry Johnston are each credited with a pair of victories, the others going to Walter Misosky, Pat Priest and Wayne Adams.

Two of the three losses have been charged up to Misosky. Walter started out against the Hornets on June 8 when the Army dropped a 5-3 decision and he was also starting pitcher on June 25 when the Arrows won 4-2. Pat Priest was beaten by the Arrows 3-2 on June 29.

Both of the wins credited to Gray were relief jobs. John took over from Jerry Johnston with the Hornets on May 30 when the score was tied in the sixth. He pitched the tenth inning against the Dodgers on June 13 after the Yanks had drawn even in the ninth. Wayne Adams had worked the first nine frames.

Baldwin and Adams did the chucking in the 9-9 tie with Hornets on July 6 and Gray was in the 3-3 deadlock with the Dodgers two days later.

HERE AND THERE . . .

CAPT. Frank Wrigglesworth set up a new league record by drawing four free transportation ducats to first last night and is now tied with Fred Lupul for most walks, each having 15. The Arrow left-fielder was not in his best waiting-out form, for he secured only one pass.

Previous high mark for bases on balls in a single game this year was three and was held jointly by Wrigglesworth, Lupul, John Gray and Jim Kelly.

Bobby Carse, Chicago Black Hawks hockey star who copped off the golf title at Country Club a few days ago, is counting on entering the annual tournament at Wetaskiwin, which is understood to be slated for this coming week-end.

PO. Rusty Wynn, who played with the Dodgers last year, was giving the boys at Renfrew the once over Tuesday night.

Walk-Rites and Manville Bluebrids resume their playoff series for the northern Alberta title senior girls' fastball title at Kingsway Park tonight.

Cardinals Sweep Twin Bill For 11th Straight Victory

ST. LOUIS, July 28.—(AP)—Adding to the longest winning streak of the year in the major leagues, St. Louis Cardinals won their 10th and 11th games in a row Tuesday by taking a doubleheader from Philadelphia Phillies.

Murry Dickson, yielding only five hits, captured the opener of the twin bill 6-2 and Howard Krist triumphed over his favorite victims in the nightcap, 5-2.

The clean sweep increased the Cardinals' National League lead over Brooklyn Dodgers to 9½ games and, at the same time, dumped the slipping Phillies into seventh place.

Whipple Takes Lacombe Golf

LACOMBE.—Floyd Whipple, golf ace from Calgary's Regal Club, won the final in the championship flight of Lacombe's first War Savings Stamps Golf tournament Sunday when he finished one up to defeat Archie Gray of the Lacombe club. Gray was all square with the winner on the seventh hole in the final round, but found the rough with his ball on the eight to go down one. He lost his chance to tie the match when they halved the last hole.

Second flight was won by C. L. Willis, veteran Stettler publisher. Pat McFarlane took the third flight play-off, during which he finished with a 32 for the nine holes to equal the course record. Other flights were won by Jack Mosness, Camrose; O. Stenne, Red Deer; Dan McDonald, Lacombe; A. Hanson, Bentley, and L. W. Robinson, Munson.

Seventy golfers from all parts of Alberta competed in the tournament and ideal weather prevailed. All entry-fee money was used to purchase War Savings Stamps and these were in turn paid out in prizes.

AC2 Watts of the winners led the hitting attack with three in four trips to the plate. Shannon was the top hitter for the Americans, getting two in three times at bat.

Men's Games at Kingsway Thursday

Senior Men's Fastball League doubleheader is scheduled for Thursday night at Kingsway park. Moose meet U.S. Engineers in the opener, which gets underway at 7 o'clock, and No. 3 "M" Depot and Aircraft Repair Cubs battle for the leadership in the afterpiece.

Athletic Tests at Stadium Tonight

Everything is now set for the class "C" athletic tests for boys, tonight at 7 o'clock at the Clarke Stadium. Mr. Clark Ready of the Y.M.C.A. together with his leaders' group will be in charge of the meet and have worked out plans to handle up to 200 boys.

Several boys have already made their entry at the Y.M.C.A., and others will be added at the track up to 6:45 o'clock. Boy Scouts, C.S.E.T., Tuxis, Junior Citizens and other groups are advised to get their entries in right away.

There is no entry fee. The only stipulation is that you must be a resident of Edmonton and that you do not weigh less than 70 pounds.

The class "C" athlete must qualify in four out of five events in order to be eligible for one of the handsome certificates being presented by the city to all winners.

If a boy qualifies for a "C" certificate he will then be eligible to try for the "B" certificate. If you are a normal boy you should have no difficulty in making the grade without previous training. The "B" certificate will be a little harder to get and the "A" certificate a little more difficult still. This is your chance to test yourself out and see if you are as good as the average boy of your weight.

C.W.A.C. Beats Aircrafters To Tie Intermediate Series

C.W.A.C. forced a third and deciding game in the girls' intermediate fastball series when they defeated Aircraft Repair 9-6 Tuesday night in the curtain raiser of a double-header at Kingsway Park. Centrals trounced U.S. Army Air Corps 13-4 in the afterpiece.

The fixture was featured by the free hitting of both clubs. Phyllis Culver allowed 11 safeties in going the distance for the Army girls and Betty Hoover was charged with 16 in nine innings for the losers.

Culver led the winners' hitting parade with three in four times at bat while Flo Reidford, Aircraft Repair first sack, set the pace for her team with three in five trips to the plate.

C.W.A.C. took the lead in the first inning with a run by Lil Willis, but the Aircrafters came back in the second to go out in front when Reidford and Doreen Barrett scored.

Runs by Grace Swerdfeger and right fielder Angela Marowski in the fourth and one by Hoover in the fifth made it 5-1.

The winners rallied in the last of the fifth when Vi Leadbeatter, Culver, Kay Van Loo and Jackie Ford scored to tie the count.

Flo Reidford brought in her second of the game in the seventh to make it 6-5 for the Aircrafters, but the Army girls came back in the other half of the same session to take the lead when Culver tallied the tying and winning runs.

The winners added two more in the eighth, which were scored by Bea Gill and Mary McConaghy to clinch the game.

The Centrals took the lead in the second, of the abbreviated six inning game, when Tommy Bracken, Morris Gogek and Blake Barker scored, and were never headed. They added an other in the next session which was brought in by Jack Bailey.

The Airmen cut the lead to two in the latter half of the third with runs by Helm and Bill Wingert, but the winners rallied for seven in the fourth and two more in the fifth to clinch the game. Hornets Play Yanks Tonight

The Senior Baseball League game between Hornets and Yanks originally scheduled for Sunday last and postponed due to weather conditions will be played at Renfrew Park tonight starting at 7 o'clock.

Newton Picking is expected to be the pitching choice for the Hornets and Pat Priest will do the mound work for the Army.

To Be Inducted

CINCINNATI, July 28.—(AP)—Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati Reds lefthander, will report for induction into military service the latter part of August, Jack Brady, clerk of local board 7, said Tuesday.

Johnston and Adams Retain Pitching Edge

MORRIS HAWKEY failed in his bid for victory number seven Tuesday night as the Yanks jumped on him for five runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings and went on to mark up a 6-4 decision over the Arrows in their scheduled Senior Baseball League attraction at Renfrew Park.

Jerry Johnston, the winning pitcher gave up five singles in 5 1-3 frames and with the score standing 4-2 for the Army retired in favor of Wayne Adams, who cut the losers off with one safety and a pair of earned runs for the balance of the game. Hal Stafford relieved Hawkey and was nicked for one counter and three hits in the 1 2-3 innings he worked.

Timely stick work by Harry Baldwin, John Gullekson and Manuel Dorsky who collected seven of the Yanks' 10 blows and sound work on the mound gave the league leaders the edge. Four double plays, two by each club gave the affair an added zest.

Morey La Vold, first man up walked, but Sammy Kahn hit into a beautifully executed double play—Miller to Wrigglesworth to Gullekson. Fred Lupul went out second to first.

Capt. Frank Wrigglesworth was rewarded for waiting and drew a walk, the first of four for the night. Frank was forced at second by Harley Miller—Hawkey to La Vold, but Manuel Dorsky singled into centre sending the Yank short to third. Dorsky took second on the throwin and after Harry Baldwin walked both he and Miller scored on John Gullekson's drive to centre.

Hawkey then struck out Misosky and Gray to end the rally.

The Arrows cut the lead to one run in the second. Jack Chambers walked, but was forced Miller to Wrigglesworth by Warehime after Welch had flied out to Miller at short.

Bill Green singled into right field sending Warehime to third and when Miller juggled Wayne Hawkey's roller Warehime scored.

Jack Chambers made a great play on Baldwin's hard drive in the third and doubled Dorsky at first, the Yank fielder having reached the initial station by a scratch hit over short.

The Army boys worked out a double on the Arrows in the first of the fourth. After Warehime had flied out to Misosky in left field, Bill Green hit past third. Wayne Hawkey then rolled an easy one to Johnston, but the latter in trying to catch Green at second threw high to Wrigglesworth and both runners were safe.

Then with Morris Hawkey at bat and hit and run apparently on and misfiring, brother Wayne was caught flat-footed between first and second and both he and Green went out, the play being Johnston to Lolla to Gullekson to Baldwin to Wrigglesworth.

The Yanks boosted the count to 3-1 in the fourth. Gullekson singled for the second time and after Misosky flied out to Kahn, John Gray also hit safely sending the big first baseman to third from where he scored as Lolla was being thrown out second to first.

Morris Hawkey counted for the Arrows in the fifth after hitting into left field, going on to second when Kahn walked and scoring on Jack Chambers' second hit of the game.

Yanks got back their two-run lead in their half of the inning. Wrigglesworth walked, but was forced at second by Miller. Miller however stole second and went on to third as Dorsky grounded out to first, crossing the plate when Baldwin pumped a single into centre.

In the seventh Wrigglesworth drew his third pass to first and then stole second, going on to third when Miller was thrown out short to first. Dorsky's third single brought in the run to make the score 5-2.

After getting Giles on strikes in the eighth, Adams walked both Warehime and Bill Green. Wayne Hawkey's single into right brought in Warehime and Green crossed the plate as Hal Stafford grounded out to Gullekson.

Yanks counted again in the eighth. Walter Misosky bounced a double off the right field boards and went to third on Gray's single, scoring when Warehime heaved a wild one trying to stop Misosky at third.

Practice Game

Army and Navy Pats are playing the Yanks, of the Senior Baseball League, an exhibition fastball game at Victoria Hi grounds on Friday night.

Succeeds Bucky Harris

Fitzsimmons Named Pilot Of Philadelphia Phillies

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.—(AP)—Freddy Fitzsimmons, veteran pitcher-coach of Brooklyn Dodgers, has been named manager of Philadelphia Phillies, the board of directors of the club said last night. He will succeed Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris.

L. Wister Randolph, a member of the club's board of directors, and George Fletcher, secretary, authorized the statement which said Fitzsimmons "has been engaged as manager of the Phillies to assume his duties before the night game in St. Louis today."

The statement did not mention Harris. Both Randolph and Fletcher declined any comment or further elaboration as to his status.

A short time before the Phillies' officials spoke, the Dodgers had announced Fitzsimmons' unconditional release to accept the new post. Fitzsimmons said he felt the appointment was "a great honor" and added the team "has great possibilities."

The Philadelphia statement attributed the decision to the board of directors, and said it "was in the best interests of successful operation of the club."

The change came a few hours after the Phillies, beaten twice in a doubleheader at St. Louis, had dropped to seventh place in the National League standings. They have lost six of their last seven games.

GIVEN RELEASE BY BROOKLYN DODGERS

CHICAGO, July 28—(AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers Tuesday gave Fred Fitzsimmons his unconditional release in order that he might become manager of Philadelphia Phillies.

Fitzsimmons, who has been on the Dodgers' roster as an active pitcher and part-time coach, will go to St. Louis to take charge of the Phillies today. Fitzsimmons said he did not know what the Phillies would do about Bucky Harris, whom he replaces as manager of the club.

Fitzsimmons just rejoined the Dodgers after an absence of several days, during which he was conferring with William D. Cox, president of the Phillies, in New York.

Fitzsimmons, a veteran of more than 18 years of major league pitching with New York and Brooklyn, came up to the National League from Indianapolis in 1925. He spent the greater part of his major league career with New York Giants. He was traded to Brooklyn for Tom Baker in 1937 and later became a Dodger coach.

He has pitched in nine games this year, winning three and losing four.

Twice he led pitchers in the National League. In 1930 he won 19 games and lost seven for the Giants and in 1940 he compiled a record of 16 victories and two defeats for Brooklyn. He pitched in three world series but never won a game, losing three times for the Giants in 1933 and 1936 and being forced out of the Brooklyn lineup by an injury in 1941 after pitching seven scoreless innings against the Yankees.

At St. Louis Harris said he has had no word he was being replaced.

"This is the most shocking thing that has happened to me in my entire life," he said. "I do not understand it. Apparently Mr. Cox means to call me sometime and tell me of the change and at that time I expect to get the explanation I feel is in order."

EXPECT PHILS TO FIRE HARRIS

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Record will say today that Philadelphia Phillies have fired Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris as manager and named Fred Fitzsimmons, Brooklyn Dodgers pitcher-coach, to take his place.

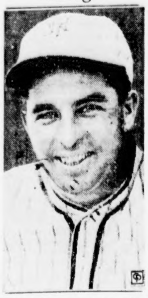

The move, the Record will say, was "announced as having been made by the club's board of directors."

"A statement issued by the Phillies office read:

"'The board of directors of the Philadelphia National League club announced Tuesday that Mr. Fred Fitzsimmons, formerly coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has been engaged as manager of the Phillies to assume his duties before the night game in St. Louis tonight.

"'The board stated that it had considered the manner of the management of the club at great length and believes that the action taken was in the best interests of the successful operation of the club'."

Manager

Freddy Fitzsimmons is making another move. This time the veteran National League pitcher goes to Philadelphia, but it will be in the role of manager of the Phils. Fitzsimmons has been granted his release by the Dodgers.

"I [illegible] the part between 'dear sirs' and 'sincerely yours'!"

Today's Sport Parade

NEW YORK, July 28.—Beau Jack, the little Jaw-ja shoe-shine boy who parlayed a pair of iron fists into a $100,000 bankroll, explained yesterday that he has two ambitions to satisfy before the snow flies—and both have to do with fighting.

First, he wants to regain the lightweight championship of the world. Secondly, he wants to get into a far bigger battle—as a private in the American army.

"And I'm gonna do my best to do both," promised the kinky-haired kid who only three years ago earned his first purse—$3—for winning a six-man battle royal at the Augusta, Ga., National golf course. "If everything goes right I should do it by the end of October."

TRAINING UNDER AMADEE

THE battling Beau is training assiduously for both objectives. Under the watchful eye of Larry Amadee, who trained Joe Louis and John Henry Lewis, he is polishing his ringcraft constantly. To whip the illiteracy which originally kept him out of the army, the one-time locker room attendant has hired a tutor to teach him the three R's.

Beau is the boy who was first sent to the ring wars mid-way in 1940 and since then has won 49 of 56 fights, 29 by knockouts. He reached the high point of his brief boxing career in Madison Square Garden last Dec. 18 by knocking out Tippy Larkin for recognition in New York as lightweight king. Then came two victories over the veteran Fritzie Zivic and a decision over Henry Armstrong.

He was a happy little colored lad after each of the victories as he sat in the crowded dressing room at the Garden, receiving the congratulations of his admirers. But he was a sorry spectacle the night of May 21, the night Bob Montgomery hammered him around the ring to take away that championship Beau had prized so highly. His face was swollen almost beyond recognition, a balloon-like hand rested in an ice bucket and tears trickled down his dusky cheeks as the fair weather followers passed his door to throng the dressing room of the new champion.

MAY WIN TITLE AGAIN

BEAU is a silent, polite lad who doesn't do much talking. But he vowed that night to get Montgomery in the ring again and win back the title. Quietly he has been preparing himself, brushing off more of the rough edges with two straight knockout triumphs. Now he feels he's ready for their September rematch.

"We made a mistake by trying to box Montgomery," admits Chick (Hercules) Wergeles, the Beau's midget manager. But we won't do it this time. We're gonna go out there like we always did—throwing from the outfield—and we'll be surprised if Montgomery wins a round. Won't we kid?"

The Beau only smiled, refusing to make such a brash prediction. But there was a look in his eye which said more than words, a glance which shouted that he intended to roll over one objective and into the other regardless of Montgomery and the three R's.

CANADIAN SPORTSHOTS

By ALAN HARVEY

TORONTO, July 28 — (CP) — Horse players with heart ailments and no money saved up to buy insurance spend anguished moments when the "photo" sign flashes on the tote board. Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson, intrigued by this photo finish business, tried a more scientific approach. He found:

Forty-two Canadian and United States tracks (thoroughbred, harness and dog-race) used 450,000 feet of film last year. . . . This year not an inch of film can be bought in Canada because of the war. The supply comes from the United States, now rationed to 200,000. . . . Chicago tracks use 320 feet every day. Dog tracks use 15 to a race.

Wonderland, the Boston dog-racing establishment, refused to pay $100 or $150 daily to rent the eye-in-the-sky. Foxily, Wonderland offered to pay 1-10th of one per cent of the daily mutuel handle—and snarled bitterly when the "take" soared unexpectedly to an average $240,000, forcing the limit $200 rental the owners set, but never expected to pay.

THE CAMERA DOESN'T LIE

Elmer deflates the theory that the camera favors the outside horse, and if you think the picture can be "doctored," you're wrong too. The eye-in-the-sky company offers $5,000 to anyone who can touch up any picture in 30 minutes to make it appear that the second horse actually won the race.

THE SOCK EXCHANGE

Flt. Lt. Bert Light at R.C.A.F. headquarters in Montreal reports plans are under way to match LAC Dave Castilloux with an "outstanding boxer from across the line" prior to meeting Pte. Johnny Greco in a Canadian championship affair. We could stand more details on that Castilloux-Greco meeting, Bert. . . . Al Lust, who knocked out Maxie Berger in 12 rounds before bowing twice to Castilloux, arrived safely "Somewhere in England" recently after a 13-day odyssey from Calgary. The former Western Canada welterweight champion is undecided whether to continue without manager-brother Eppie Lust, whom Al says "was mainly responsible for my success in the ring."

AROUND THE CIRCUIT

Howard Awrey, with Hamilton Wildcats last fall, has reported for duty with the R.C.A.F. . . . Brother Hardy remains with the Ontario Rugby Football Union entry. . . . Eddie Shore of Buffalo Bisons is due in Saskatoon shortly to make arrangements for his fall hockey school.

No Decision on Manitoba Rugby

WINNIPEG, July 28.—(CP)—Decision of the Manitoba Rugby Football Union to operate senior football this autumn was deferred until Aug. 6, it was announced following a meeting of union officials Monday night.

The union has declined to commit itself on plans for the coming fall until the Winnipeg Rugby Football Club holds its organization meeting Aug. 3.

Last year a three-team senior league was operated here, with Bombers, R.C.A.F. Flyers and University of Manitoba as members.

Grand Circuit

The young pacer, owned by R. H. Johnston of Charlotte, N.C., and driven by Henry Thomas, won the $1,000 stake for three-year-old pacers, beating the field in three straight heats.

Babe Ruth To Be Manager For Day Yankee Stadium

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—The big guy is coming home today; home to the vast concrete house he built with his two powerful arms.

Babe Ruth returns to the Yankee stadium—the house that Ruth built—as manager-for-a-day as a team made up of members of the Yankee and Cleveland Indian squads, known as the Yank-Lands, meets the Cloudbusters of the North Carolina navy pre-flight school in an exhibition game as part of a Red Cross benefit doubleheader. The Yanks and Indians play their regularly scheduled game in the other half of the bill.

It won't be the Ruth of old. He won't roll up to the plate with that mincing stride to send a baseball in a tremendous arc into the right field bleachers. He won't, that is, unless he personally elects himself to the role of pinch hitter, and late reports indicate he will confine his duties strictly to managing.

He'll be the sole boss. Managers Lou Boudreau, of the Indians, and Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, will withdraw to the shadows of the stands after they have directed their respective teams in the regular league game, leaving everything to the Bambino and his two aides, Coaches Art Fletcher, of the Yanks, and Del Baker, of Cleveland.

It will be the fulfillment of a dream for Ruth—the dream of managing a team of major leaguers in the Stadium which saw his greatest glory.

Pte. Red Ruffing Hurls No-Hitter

LONG BEACH, Calif., July 28.—(CP)—Pte. Red Ruffing, former New York Yankee mound ace, Tuesday pitched the first no-hit, no-run game of his baseball career.

Wearing the uniform of the Sixth Ferrying Group, Army Air Transport Command, Ruffing hung a 2-0 defeat on the Santa Ana Airbase team, led by his former teammate, Joe DiMaggio.

Ruffing struck out nine batters, including the great DiMaggio, who also popped out on his other two appearances at bat.

Buffalo Bisons to Remain in A.H.L.

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 28.—(AP)—Rumors that Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League would join the National League next season were quashed last night when General Manager Eddie Shore of the Buffalo club said the Bisons would continue in the American circuit during the 1943-44 campaign.

Shore added that Cleveland, also rumored as a possible N.H.L. entrant for the coming season, would operate in the American League. The Buffalo general manager declared that six of last season's clubs definitely will play, providing the sport is able to withstand demands of a country at war.

Shore said that the Hershey, Pa., club is an unknown quantity at this time because of the automobile pleasure driving ban in Pennsylvania.

Orlando's Trial Opens in Detroit

DETROIT, July 28.—(AP)—David Ferguson, part-owner of a war plant in which hockey player Jimmy Orlando of Detroit Red Wings was formerly employed, told Federal Judge Ward J. Moinet Tuesday that Orlando was transferred from an essential war job to office work last November, and that his draft board was not notified.

Orlando is charged with violation of the United States Selective Service Act. He received a 2-B classification last summer after Ferguson had informed the draft board he would be employed on an essential job.

Under cross-examination Ferguson said that he did not know it was his duty to inform the draft board when Orlando changed his work status.

Orlando was indicted on five counts, which carry a maximum sentence of 22 years in prison and $45,000 in fines. The trial opened yesterday.

Hal Wagner Gives Explanation For Improved Hitting

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.—(AP)—Catcher Hal Wagner of the Philadelphia Athletics came up with a simple explanation Tuesday for the new-found slugging power that has zoomed his batting average from .260 to .320—a 60-point gain in one season—despite a painful injury.

The explanation: Coach Lena Blackburne, who discovered him and remolded him from an outfielder into a catcher, and now, Wagner says, has reorganized his batting style.

"Until this year it seemed that I didn't get around fast enough the way I swung," Wagner said. "So Blackburne had me hold my arms higher and farther away from my body. That was all. Now I see the ball better and can hit to left and right. In the beginning I didn't get much distance, but even then I got more safe hits."

The former Duke University player, who, Blackburne says, reminds him of Bill Dickey, maintained his hot pace even after a misjudged foul ball chipped away a piece of bone from his thumb several weeks ago, in a game with the Yankees in New York.

Farm Production Quotas are UP!

Photographs by National Film Board, Ottawa

When normal time comes, we would like to see you in this sunny picture, helping the hard pressed farmer get his crops in.

It's a fine healthy, open-air life, herding sheep, soon to be lost . . . and wool, badly needed in the war effort.

Beef on the hoof. Canada is called to supply higher quotas this year.

As their contribution to the Nation's war effort, Canadian farmers have been set increased quotas in most of the important items of agricultural production: more cows, hogs and sheep, larger volumes of hay and oats, greater all-round production. Yet the farmer has to meet this schedule with reduced numbers of farm workers, compared to peace times. He can only meet what is expected of him if he gets help from urban residents.

If you are in non-essential employment, if you can be spared for summer farm work without other important war production suffering, you should join the army of the land. You can help agriculture, which means helping to carry our obligations as a member of the United Nations.

If you have only your vacation time to spare, then spend your holidays working on a farm. The change and exercise will be of benefit—and you will have the experience of knowing that you have contributed still further to the national welfare in these times of emergency.

Tax, Utilities Revenue for Six Months Shows Gain

Income These Sources Increased by $15,189.89 Over Same Period of 1942

Revenue paid into the civic treasury in taxes and surpluses from the city-owned utilities for the first six months of 1943 amounted to $534,391.02 compared with $519,201.13 for the same period last year, an increase of $15,189.89, according to a statement filed Wednesday with the city commissioners by A. A. Campbell, city comptroller.

Submits Report

A. A. Campbell, city comptroller, who Wednesday filed with the city commissioners a report on the operations of the civic owned utilities for the six months of 1943 ending June 30.

The revenue paid in taxes and surpluses for the 1943 period is the equivalent of 10 mills at the current mill rate, and it is anticipated that the total revenue for this year from utility sources will slightly exceed 20 mills.

In addition to the profits and taxes accruing $605,058.89 has been set aside in the reserve renewal accounts of the five utilities in the 1943 six-months period against $381,228.44 for the same period last year.

The real bright spot in the utility picture is the remarkable showing of the street railway system. For the six months period this year there was a surplus of $16,224.19 compared with a deficit of $24,872 for the same period last year. In addition to achieving this surplus the system, during the 1943 period, set aside $184,285 in renewal reserve account, compared with $91,500 for the same period last year.

Total expenditures for the 1943 period amounted to $1,684,535.26 compared with $1,533,043.30 for the same period last year, to leave a net surplus on operations of $1,475,941.02 against $1,244,350.62 for the 1942-period. The net surplus after deductions for capital charges, renewal reserves and taxes, is $206,774.11 for the 1943-period compared with $206,091.43 in the first six months of last year.

CAPITAL CHARGES

Capital charges for the 1943 period amounted to $336,491.11 compared with $343,921.05, a decrease of $7,429.94. Taxes paid to the city during the 1943 period totalled $327,616.91 against $313,109.70 for the 1942 period.

The individual surplus achieved by each utility during the 1943 period was: electric light department, $7,654; power plant, $76,244; telephone department, $83,651; and waterworks, $23,000. In the 1942 period the surplus of the departments was: electric light, $66,068; power plant, $72,682; telephone department, $79,751 and waterworks, $12,521.

The sharp decline in the surplus achieved by the electric light department is accounted for mainly through the large increase in the amount set aside by this department in renewal reserve account. In the 1942 period the amount earmarked for renewal reserve was $46,600, while this year for the six months period the amount is set at $137,876.97.

RENEWAL RESERVES

Renefal reserves set aside by the other utilities were: power plant, $160,000 compared with $134,000 for the 1942 period; street railway, $184,285 against $91,500; waterworks, $74,213, against $77,736, and the telephone department $48,683 compared with $31,392.

During the six months of 1943 the following expenditures were made from renewal reserve accounts on the different utilities: electric light department, $19,701.61; power plant, $79,470.89; street railway, $88,206.29; telephone department, $92,338.13 and waterworks, $19,668.30.

Set Aside Period Stress Stamp Sale

A quarter hour next Friday afternoon has been set aside by the "Stamp Out the U-Boat" officials in Edmonton as "Fifteen Minutes for Canada". The purpose of this plan is to give every person employed in down town Edmonton a last chance to invest in War Savings Stamps during the July campaign.

The exact time is 3 to 3:15 p.m. Friday. Retail stores have been asked to have on hand an ample supply of stamps. Heads of business firms where larger staffs are employed are being asked by campaign officials to give their personnel an opportunity to leave the office and make some purchases at the nearest retail outlet.

Campaign officials stated Wednesday that this simple plan proved very successful last fall.

The retail section of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce is cooperating with the campaign committee in notifying retailers of the plan and outlining their part in the program. Cecil Martin, chairman of the retail section is urging all merchants to co-operate to the fullest extent.

In the meantime several hundred young Edmontonians working under the direction of the Junior Service Bureau are continuing a brisk house-to-house canvass and report ready response from Edmonton householders.

Capitol Theatre Rose Show Display

Military Police Will Take Care In City Streets

Assurance has been given by United States authorities that the same care expected from members of the Edmonton city police will be taken by American military police in dealing with law infractions within the city, Mayor John W. Fry stated Wednesday morning after a conference between Chief of Police Reginald Jennings, an official of the United States Army and the mayor.

The conference was held as a result of the shooting incident on Thursday evening when an American military policeman fired in the air to halt a man fleeing after being questioned when found tampering with a United States "jeep."

Bay Mare Missing From Pasture Land

A bay mare, between nine-ten years old, and weighing from 1,350 to 1,400 pounds, was taken from a pasture near his home on July 4, Edgar Young, 10918 129 street, reported to city police Monday.

At the time he missed the animal, he said, he thought it had strayed, and accordingly notified the city poundkeeper. When it failed to return, he believed it had been stolen. He stated he suspected two men who had worked for him for a few days, but said he did not know their names. He wsa aware, however, that they had been living with another man who some time ago complained of being assaulted and robbed.

Getting Around

Jack DeLong

Ross Munro, newsman hero of the Dieppe raid, now with the Canadian forces in Sicily, gives a vivid description of scenes of joy in that nearly conquered Italian Island, when the people learned of the fall pf Mussolini.

The relief expressed by the primitive peoples of Sicilian towns leads one to marvel at the fact that the Fascist regime could last for 21 years.

Guns and ignorance are the real reasons for fascist tyranny lasting so long. In addition, there were the sugar-coated promises. Promises of new empires where the little fellow was to have a chance to become as opulent in a far off land as the fascist overlord at home.

But the chief weapon of fascism has been ignorance. Fascism can only endure where complete and unfettered examination of all economic theories, systems of governments and religions is prevented.

The greatest care in the world will need to be observed by the leaders of the United Nations to avoid the ready acceptance of the belief that fascism has passed because its Italian author has passed.

The basic operating mechanics of fascism are not necessarily destroyed because a strutting figure, a jutting jaw and a lot of silly stage-managed balcony scenes have passed away.

Fascism is the greatest racket of all time as far as government rackets are concerned. In short, it is a gang of ruthless, clever thugs, backed by the bayonets of the army, against the people of a nation.

The front man doesn't of necessity need to shout and strut. He doesn't of necessity have to wear a certain colored shirt.

Loudly touted as the ultimate in efficiency, fascism turned out to be efficient only for the small minority at the top of the corporate state. Brutality is disguised as discipline. Fascism must always face defeat in the final analysis because it is thoroughly unscientific.

Its philosophy of war is outmoded by the discoveries that are being exposed in thousands of scientific laboratories of the world each day. It attempts to revive the fierce struggle of the primitive jungles under modern auspices in an age of potential abundance.

Knowledge is the real destroyer of fascism.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

What do you think of the suggestion by provincial authorities that gardeners should store produce for winter use?

THE ANSWERS

MICHAEL JACKSON, railway employee: You're going to need to store vegetables if you're going to eat this winter, I think. There is going to be a shortage of canned vegetables, and we were out of some types of them, such as onions, this spring. There are hundreds more people in this area now, and they must be fed. If we don't store what foods we can, we'll have to pull in our bells this winter, I'm afraid.

S. CHISHOLM, clerk: We have only a small garden, and there's not going to be enough to store or can. Fresh vegetables out of our own garden will afford a welcome change for us—if they ever ripen. The season is very slow this year. I'm all for the storage idea, but haven't the amount to store. A big house on a small lot is our garden problem.

HARRY DUNN, traveller: A dandy idea, to store vegetables—but where do you do it, if you have no basement or root house? We're canning our surplus, as there's no way of keeping it otherwise. We tried storing carrots and potatoes last winter, and they all went soft on us, and were no good. The carrots are supposed to be kept in sand, I learned, after it was too late.

Crews Are Busy On Maintenance Of City Streets

Maintenance crews are busy throughout the city working on the repair of paved, gravelled and dirt roads, repairing wooden sidewalks, and other civic maintenance work, according to officials of the engineer's department.

Road repair gangs have completed the re-grading and gravelling and the ditching of 112 avenue between 61 and 76 streets. This work was strongly urged by Ald. F. J. Mitchell when estimates were being discussed at the beginning of the year.

Repair of concrete and bituminous paving is under way in the downtown section of the ctiy, and six trucks and four grading outfits are working on grading of gravelled and dirt roads.

Lack of manpower has delayed starting on local improvement construction work, it was stated, but it is expected that some relief in the labor situation will occur in the near future when this work will be proceeded with.

Re-paving of the Jasper avenue and 101 street intersection will start as soon as the steel frogs and switches for the street railway installation arrives in the city. This material is expected here this week.

Street railway maintenance crews are working on the 124 street route and are engaged in track lifting, cutting of grass and lining up the track. Other crews are employed on similar work on other street railway system routes.

Child Drowns In Water Ditch At Looma Farm

Marjorie Bittner, 18-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bittner, Looma, was accidentally drowned Tuesday afternoon in a ditch of water at the home of Gustav Bittner, it was reported to R.C.M.P. authorities in Edmonton, Wedensday morning.

The child had accompanied her mother and some other children from the home farm to the Gustav Bittner farm, about a quarter mile away, about 11:45 a.m. Tuesday. While Mrs. Bittner and several other women were doing some canning, the children played about the place.

Father of the child, also at the farm for the day, had dinner and then returned to his work. It was some time later when the child's mother asked about her, and was told by the other children that they did not know. A search began, ending when the child was located in a three foot ditch containing about a foot of water. She was unconscious when removed.

Mr. and Mrs. Bittner have two other children, Ernest, five years old, and Ruth, two years old.

Burial will take place at Cooking Lake cemetery, it was stated, although no date was set. It was understood that no inquest will be held.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Folks Should Pray for Brains, Humor in Mates

Yet College Quiz Shows That Most Young People Want Money and Beauty Above All Else For Matrimony

In an effort to find out something about the matrimonial ideals of the younger generation, a questionnaire has just been sent out to the students of a large co-educational college asking them what qualities they will demand in the men and women they marry.

Of course, in these hysterical war days, when everything from the cradle to the grave seems matrimonial material and boys and girls are rushing to the altar with strangers they scarcely know by sight, the choice in husbands and wives seems to be the old maid's prayer: "Send me anybody, good Lord, anybody."

But given a chance to sit down quietly and think it over, the youngsters' expression of their hearts' desire in a mate as shown by this quiz would be alarming if one did not remember that practically no one marries according to previous plans and specifications. Some girl with a come-hither look in her eyes, or some lad with a way with him comes along, and all the fine practical theories are gone with the wind.

YOUTHS RATE MONEY HIGH

Anyway, it is disconcerting to find that apparently the modern youths and maidens are more concerned about the state of their pockets than they are of their hearts, for almost without exception both sexes rated money as the most desirable quality in a husband or wife. The girls all wanted to marry millionaires, preferably young and handsome ones, but anyway millionaires. They also wanted their husbands to be good dancers and to have a taste for night clubs and stepping out, but the main consideration was the bank roll.

The boys also considered marriage from the financial standpoint, and considered that the most alluring charm that a girl could have would be to possess a father who had worked so hard his son-in-law would not have to work at all. But they were a trifle more demanding than the girls and wanted their Miss Moneybags to be not only rich, but beautiful and glamorous, a happy combination, as it were, of the banker's daughter and a cinema starlet.

Curiously enough, so far as this survey went it showed that not one of the young people of either sex demanded brains in their mates. Nor did they take into consideration the temperament and disposition of those with whom they were proposing to spend the balance of their lives. Neither did they apparently give a single thought to the matter of congeniality and whether they had the same tastes and habits and would be able to coo together like turtledoves, or be predestined to fight like cats and dogs.

IGNORE ESSENTIAL QUALITIES

But the qualities that these boys and girls in their blindness overlooked as nonessential in a husband or wife, are, in reality, the only ones that are important, while the things that they propose to marry for are the ones that soonest turn marriage into cinders, ashes and dust.

Take money, which the girls believe will secure their felicity, yet the one thing that money will not buy is happiness. It will not buy love, nor tenderness, nor understanding, nor consideration. No woman is satisfied with a husband who is nothing but a meal ticket and a charge account. Hearts break under brocade as well as homespun. Some of the most homeless women in the world own a dozen houses. Look at the number of divorces among the multimillionaires and you will see how far money will go in purchasing domestic bliss.

And look at the men who marry for money. Not even the grace of God can keep the poor husband of a rich wife from looking and acting like a pet pup. And feeling like it, and from wanting to bite the hand that feeds it. Also the man who marries for beauty makes an equally foolish bargain because he is bound to lose out in a few years. And when his wife has lost her looks, what has he?

The girls did not ask that the men they marry have intelligence, nor did the boys look for that in their wives, yet if a girl marries a man with brains, he will get her the money she craves, and if a boy marries a woman with intelligence, she will have charm left after her beauty has fled.

Nor did the youngsters consider congeniality, yet nine-tenths of domestic happiness consists in husbands and wives being able to yes-yes each other instead of being in a perpetual argument. The people whose society we enjoy, with whom we can talk endlessly, who double our every joy and halve our sorrows, are those who are sympathetic with us, not those who rub our fur the wrong way.

If young people were wise, instead of asking for money and beauty when they marry, they would pray to Heaven to send them husbands and wives who have plenty of grey matter in their heads, who have a well developed funnybone, and who like the same kind of pie that they do.

"Tax" Break

ST. LOUIS, July 28—(AP)—A St. Louis man, whose total state income tax is 12 cents, has elected to pay in quarterly instalments, Revenue Collector Richard Gruner said. He has paid the three cents due in June but still owes 13 cents—because the state assesses cost of mailing statements and receipts against the taxpayer.

What To Do

What are the main things I should remember in my first job?

Answer—The first essentials of efficiency are personal neatness and tidiness. In your first job, naturally you will be "green," but alertness, attention to orders, and an interest in your work, together with a reasonable amount of intelligence and a neat personal appearance will see you through.

Girls with unwashed or uncombed hair, dirty fingernails and soiled clothing will be undesirable, even today when industry needs so urgently the help of all of us. Personnel managers know that people who are clean and neat about their appearance, can be depended upon to turn out neat, clean work.

Points For Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

Mother: "If we get these peas shelled and canned this morning, would you like to go to the park for a while this afternoon? We might take Irma and Jean with us."

Mother: "I'm so worried because we don't hear from Dad that I can't settle down to do anything?"

Daughter: "I'm afraid maybe he has been shot by those old Japs."

Fears do not thrive in the atmosphere of a home where people are busy doing things.

War Kitchen

By GAYNOR MADDOX

"Whole grained cereals, because of their protein content, are high on the food 'must' list, which is topped by meat and dairy products. These latter are scarce, therefore, we are going to find that our diet will contain more and more of these rich nutritious cereals," says Elsie Stark, graduate home economist, and adviser to a well-known food manufacturing company.

Miss Stark adds, "Oatmeal is one of the richest cereals in protein, vitamin B, and other minerals, and is inexpensive. It lends itself to cookery as a meat extender, for cookies and desserts, as well as a breakfast food. All that is necessary is that home-makers learn to use whole grained cereals in new ways."

SUCCOTASH CASSEROLE
(Serves 6-8)

One-quarter cup salt pork, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 cups quick oats, tiny green lima beans, ½ can creamed style or grated fresh golden bantam corn.

Chop pork. Cook in skillet until fat runs and pork begins to brown. Add salt and oats. Mix together thoroughly. Arrange lima beans in ½-inch thick layer in well-greased casserole. Cover with corn. Sprinkle with half the oatmeal mixture. Arrange a second layer of beans, corn and oatmeal mixture. Pour 1 cup milk carefully into the side of the casserole. Bake in moderate oven (375 deg. F.) 30 minutes.

MEAT AND VEGETABLES A LA TEXAS
(Serves 4-6)

Two pounds fresh tomatoes, or one No. 3 can, 1 large onion chopped fine, 1 cup diced celery, 1 cup kidney beans, which have been cooked; ¼ cup chopped green pepper, ½ pound ground meat, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon each of pepper and chili powder, 2 cups quick oats, ¼ cup shortening.

Slice the fresh tomatoes and place half of them in the bottom of a well-greased casserole. Mix the meat, celery, beans, green pepper and seasonings together and spread half of it on top of the tomatoes. Add the second layer of tomatoes and cover with the rest of the mixture. Top this with the quick oats that have been mixed with the melted shortening. Bake 30 to 35 minutes in oven at 400 deg. F.

Tomorrow's Menu
(Eat the Basic 7 Every Day)

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, fried oatmeal cakes, syrup, crisp bacon, coffee, milk.

LUNCH: Succotash casserole, enriched bread, butter, fresh plums, tea, milk.

DINNER: Meat and vegetables a la Texas, enriched rolls, butter, mixed greens salad, cultivated blueberries, plain cookies, tea, milk.

My Day

BY ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

CHICAGO, Ill.—For nearly 20 hours I have been flying across the United States. We have had some delays, but to me it is always a wonderful trip. Last evening just at sunset, the sky and land seemed suddenly to merge until I could no longer tell which was which. There was a little lake that the sun turned ruby red and a little beyond a much larger lake, with little wooded islands.

It was truly an earthly paradise. Then gradually, everything faded before my eyes and only a steel grey sky remained, cold and grim, and night was closing in. It seemed to typify what most of us are living through today. We try to hold before us the vision of a world to which we hope our loved ones will return.

A world in which there will be justice and, therefore, we may hope for peace. A world in which people of faiths and races will live as brothers and welcome each other's presence upon the earth, believing that the creator made us different, but still equal in his sight. A world in which we will seek together to eliminate want from the lives of human beings, so that in truth there shall no longer be slaves on this earth.

This is the only vision which can make the world's suffering bearable, and sometimes it seems to fade into the grey of night and leave us cold and desperate. Then only the words of great leaders can restore the vision and give us the heart to work for it again. So my plea is that those who have the gift of words, use them in these days to give the people hope by which to live and dream, for without the vision we shall perish.

I was reading an article about an industrialist who believes in paying his workers well, for his theory seems to be that wealth for us all lies in greater production at lower cost. He believes his workmen are the ones who can lower costs, so he pays them for doing so. It seems sensible, if his theory is correct. It seems to work for him, anyway, and his workers own 30 per cent of the business, which must add considerably to their incentive.

A letter came to me the other day telling of the work which the Boys Club of America has undertaken this summer. There are about 240 of these clubs, most of them located in congested city areas. They have gone in for food production in a big way. They work in cities, but even better, they go out under supervision to nearby farms. Here the benefit has been great to the boys as well as the farmer.

Now that I am back in the East, it is hard to believe that I thought we were not having warm enough weather in Seattle. I am sure that I am going to enjoy swimming here more than I did in Lake Washington. I am afraid I have been too long away from the shores of Maine really to enjoy very cold water. No matter how much I love every other part of my country, I am always glad to get home to the particular spot I call home.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

All parents bewail the useless destruction of toys. Mothers wonder whether they should make themselves responsible for the toys and replace them or punish the child by denying his more toys when he is destructive of the ones he has?

One must expect some destruction of toys is inevitable. Some are not made for hard usage and crumble up under it. Some toys are of so little interest to the child he can enjoy them only by pulling them apart.

Especially is this true during the age at which building up and tearing down are the dominant play patterns. If material for such type of play is not provided, the child makes the most of the toys at hand and breaks them up into parts which he can then assemble or tear apart as the fancy seizes him.

Most mechanical toys for a child between the ages of one and two, are of little amusement value. Let there be blocks and sectional and building toys so the child may investigate their possibilities instead of being hampered by a toy which is of no further interest to him once the spring has ceased to function.

As children grow they become more respectful of their possessions and their interests widen so they enjoy carts and animals and dolls and little cars and housekeeping toys to carry on their play homes in imitation of their real ones.

If such children break up their tops, for the sheer joy of destruction, one must look upon it as the result of fatigue, to which the parent is indifferent, or to some antagonism toward the parent or toward the child's social environment itself.

When a child is mad, he, like an angry adult, is apt to want to break something. He may find this conduct gets him lots of adult attention or makes of him a boy no one can manage, always an exciting role for any child.

The toys may be valueless to him because there are so many and always more where these came from. Such a wealth of toys diminishes the value of each so that any momentary mood may result in the child's destruction of the toy to show off; to anger his mother; just to be doing something.

Toys should be sturdy enough to withstand the incautious treatment of children. But when toys are destroyed regularly, despite their construction or their value, one had best look to the happiness of the child.

In some way his happiness is being jeopardized by the parent, by playmates or by boredom. Such a condition leaves destruction for itself alone as the only method by which the child can express his sour attitude toward his world.

Our leaflet, "Toys for All Ages," suggests the best choices for children of different ages, the toys in which at the moment they will be most interested. It may be had by sending a 4-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Russians See Film Mission to Moscow

MOSCOW, July 28.—(AP)—"Mission to Moscow," Hollywood version of the assignment to the Russian capital of Joseph E. Davies, United States ambassador-at-large, opened in Moscow yesterday with minor cuts. In general, the Russian audience liked the picture but was amused by some of Hollywood's ideas on Russian life.

Minute Make-Ups

Paste these in your vacation note book. Olive oil lubricates the skin but has no sun-screen properties. Your hair sunburns and needs the protection of oil or scalp ointment, rubbed lightly over the hair. Boracic acid protects your eyes from infections and soothes them after sun glare. All sunproof preparations can be effective only when applied repeatedly and according to the printed instructions.

Zeebrugge Hit In Day Attack

By RICE YAHNER

LONDON, July 28.—(AP)—With Germany's great seaport of Hamburg and industrial centre of Essen smoldering from blockbuster blows by heavy bombers, Allied light bombers so swift they eluded all defences, struck sharply by daylight yesterday at industrial targets and airfields in northern France, Holland and Belgium.

Air fields attacked included one at Tricqueville, France, which was singled out by United States medium bombers for a pounding.

Among the targets of the extensive daylight raid was Zeebrugge on the coast of Belgium. Hundreds of Allied fighters and light bombers took part in the sweep that found enemy fighter planes apparently unwilling to challenge the raiders even when vital air fields were attacked.

Two British M.P.'s Stage Fist Fight Outside Commons

By ROBERT DOWSON
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

LONDON, July 28.—Capt. Alec Stratford Cunningham-Reid and Oliver Locker-Lampson, Conservative members of parliament, exchanged blows outside the Commons chamber today after Locker-Lampson had raised the issue of the other's absence from Great Britain during the air blitz of 1940.

Locker-Lampson confirmed that they had come to blows and said that he might issue a writ against Cunningham-Reid.

During the question period in the commons, Cunningham-Reid raised the issue of why Prince Paul, former Yugo-Slavia regent, had been allowed to remove from Kenya Colony to South Africa and whether this meant that other political figures were to be allowed to go abroad for their health if necessary.

Locker-Lampson interjected:

"From what medical disability was Captain Cunningham-Reid suffering when he left England in the blitz?"

"Is it not a fact that the characteristic of the cuckoo is that it makes a nuisance of itself in other people's nests and is not Commander Locker-Lampson a cuckoo?" Cunningham-Reid questioned.

It was recalled here that Cunningham-Reid had said previously that his trip to America and then to Honolulu at the time to which Locker-Lampson referred was made so that he could confer with Doris Duke Cromwell, American tobacco heiress, regarding plans for evacuation of British children.

(Mrs. Cromwell now is in Reno seeking a divorce from James H. R. Cromwell, former U.S. minister to Canada.)

19 More Bomb Raids on Kiska

WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)—Air forces of the Pacific command striking Japanese defences with unprecedented fury, made 19 attacks on Kiska Island in the north Pacific Monday and Tuesday, the navy department reported today, and again raided Wake Island in the central Pacific.

The 19 raids in two days, announced in a navy communique, raised to 40 the number of attacks which bombers and fighter-bombers have made on embattled Kiska in a four-day period.

The island has been raided 60 times this month as airmen blasted the way for expected conquest of the enemy stronghold by Allied amphibious forces.

The raid on Wake Island was intercepted by 25 Zero fighters but the army heavy bombers destroyed seven of the Japanese planes, probably destroyed five and damaged three others.

LONDON STOCKS

LONDON, July 28.—(CP)—Profit-taking trimmed quotations of a number of industrial shares which had advanced earlier in the week but some individual issues found support in the stock market today.

Textiles were among the favored shares. Home rails were less buoyant and union shares were in supply. Oils eased fractionally along with Kaffirs. Diamond, rubber and tea shares were quiet. International securities rallied.

British funds and European bonds moved unevenly and in the foreign department Brazilians were soft.

Irregular Moves In Wheat Futures

WINNIPEG, July 28.—(CP)—Wheat futures moved irregularly today in Winnipeg grain exchange with flurries of buying and selling reported. At the close values were ⅛-⅜ cent a bushel higher with July at $1.08¼.

Volume of trade in the pit was not large and hedges not heavy. Substantial purchases were credited to American houses and minor ones to mills, exporters and shippers.

United Kingdom agents, back in the market for the third consecutive day, took an estimated 350,000 bushels of Canadian wheat for export on an exchange of futures basis.

It was announced the exchange would be closed Aug. 2 in observance of the Winnipeg Civic holiday.

Shippers, exporters and Canadian mills were reported to have taken 500,000 bushels of Nos. 1 and 2 Northern in the cash wheat market. Eastern feeders purchased odd carlots of several lower grades. No important business was transacted in cash coarse grains.

It is expected that a recent plan discussed to move 33,000,000 bushels of western wheat, oats and barley to Eastern Canada has been completed and shipment will begin immediately.

Trade was not large in rye futures. Some inter-market spreading was indicated, involving purchases here against sales at Chicago. Values were slightly stronger.

Country wheat marketings yesterday amounted to 1,027,000 bushels compared with 1,159,000 last year.

Report Nazis Moving South Through Rome

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ

MADRID, July 28.—(AP)—Reports received from Rome today said German units had been seen moving south through Rome on Monday, travelling in railroad cars which bore two Italian soldiers for every German soldier and which were listed as Italian troop convoys.

Two new newspapers began publication in Rome Monday a few hours after the announcement of Mussolini's resignation. They were Liberal publications, named "Nambo" and "Risoran."

Only two specific casualties were reported as the result of early Monday morning demonstrations. They were the chief of Ovra, the Italian secret police, and the head of Stefani, Italian news agency, Senator Manlio Morgagni, who was reported a suicide.

CLOSE OFFICES

Madrid offices of the Fascist party have been closed, and the head of the group in Spain, Conde San Marzano, has quit work.

Meanwhile from an unexpected quarter—Berlin itself—came the suggestion in a Spanish correspondent's dispatch that the new Italian foreign minister Raffaele Guariglia had been chosen because his connections with Britain made him the best possible contact with the Allies.

"The appointment of Guariglia—ambassador to Ankara and last representative of Fascism in London—leads one to assume that the man was chosen, who, if he has not continued maintaining relations with Great Britain, knows very well the European countries which have the greatest contact with British interests," he wrote.

SHOCK TO BERLIN

The correspondent made it clear that Berlin was surprised and shocked at the news of Mussolini's resignation and that German officials "expected anything from Italy but that."

The German public talked excitedly about developments in Italy, the correspondent said.

"Germans walked to their homes or to work with worry, such as I never have seen written on German faces," he related.

Everybody in Germany agreed that the war was entering a new phase, the correspondent concluded.

The Berlin correspondent of ABC confirmed the correspondent's report about German reaction and said it was impossible to look at the Italian situation without recalling France's position when Marshal Petain took power from Reynaud, who never would have made peace with the conqueror.

Rome dispatches today included an observation that both Il Popolo Di Roma and Lavoro Fascista have new directors. The latter paper came out with a new name, Lavoro Italiano.

Chicago Wheat Has Firm Tone

CHICAGO, July 28.—(AP)—A firm tone prevailed in wheat today on indications that business was expanding and a report the Commodity Credit Corporation was purchasing cash wheat in Nebraska.

Hedging came into the pit after advances of about ½ cent, restricting the upturn and confining fluctuations to narrow limits.

At the close wheat was ⅛-¼ higher, oats were up ⅛-½ and rye was unchanged to ⅛ higher.

Canadians Press Attacks Against Germans in Hills

By ROSS MUNRO

WITH THE CANADIANS IN CENTRAL SICILY, July 26.—(Delayed)—(CP)—Giving the Germans little rest, the Canadians are persisting in infantry and artillery attacks over the hills on the left flank of the Americans and have joined in the central Sicilian fighting by advancing in the northeast area.

The Canadians and Americans are using masses of artillery, firing barrages ahead of the infantry and the tanks.

Hardly an hour passes day or night when Allied gunfire cannot be heard. Close liaison has been established between the Canadians and Americans. Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, the Canadian commander, visited the American commander a few days ago, talking over the situation and making plans for further moves.

YANK LEADS CANUCKS

These days we see American jeeps and trucks hurrying through the lines on liaison jobs. The soldiers of the two forces are getting on fine. A few hours ago I saw a patrol of Canadians led by an American captain moving through the streets of a town hunting for three German stragglers.

The Axis force was more active for the last couple of weeks in the forward areas. I watched a couple of fighter-bombers whistle over the lines and drop sticks of bombs on a mountain slope where there was nothing but rock and scrub.

They were only in sight for a few minutes but Canadian anti-aircraft gunners went into action immediately. The bombs kicked up gigantic clouds of dust on the mountainside.

The battleground for the Canadians now is a stretch of undulating hills, rocks, orchards and sandy fields. The Canadians keep whacking away at their tough German opponents who are equipped with plenty of machine-guns as well as some tanks and artillery.

GUNS WELL PLACED

The machine-guns are so well placed that it takes considerable fighting to knock them out. An eastern Canada regiment last Saturday had the first crack at this line and gave it a going over before withdrawing. Troops from eastern Ontario went through during the night and bumped the Nazis some more.

The German line sagged considerably but the Germans evidently are determined to make a strong effort to delay the Canadians and their defensive position is a tough one to crack. Last night (Sunday night) there was another attack by Canadian infantry. They penetrated the enemy lines and had a rough fight in the darkness.

The Canadians are showing up well at night fighting. The Germans evidently dislike night attacks.

During the last few days I have been along the front, talking with infantry regiments and artillery units from many parts of Canada, and they are the spunkiest gang of men you could imagine.

BECOME BETTER SOLDIERS

The long advance from the Sicilian beachhead and two weeks of skirmishing and fighting, in addition to constant moves forward, have made them better soldiers rather than turned them into weary fighting men.

Officers and men vividly describe the actions fought, the positions overrun and the Germans they have killed. Everything they have learned in England seems to be working out.

While we sat in some former German slit trenches, Maj. Bill Cromb of Edmonton made this point clear. Cromb went through the English training with his unit.

He said "If we just follow our training we are dead set for success. It isn't only I who believe this but the troops too, which is most important."

DUCE PROVIDES "LIFT"

News of Mussolini's downfall, which reached the Canadians during the day, gave them a lift and a keener desire to finish the Sicilian business fast. Troops in towns saw civilians celebrating the fall of the Duce with bottles of wine and joined them in lifting brimming tin cups.

HOME GUARD AT WORK

LONDON—(CP)—The war office announced it had no objection to Home Guards wearing their uniforms at work when Guardsmen go right from work to parades and otherwise would not have an opportunity to change from civilian clothes to uniforms.

Fights in Sicily

Maj. Bill Cromb, Edmonton school teacher and widely known as a singer, is now in the thick of the fighting against the Germans in Sicily and, in the accompanying story he tells newsman Ross Munro that the long training Canadians went through in Britain is now proving invaluable. Maj. Cromb was an original member of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment, and went overseas with that great fighting unit when it was mobilized at the start of the present war in 1939.

In-the-City Camp Will Open Monday

The first of the In-the-City Camps will open on Aug. 2 in North Edmonton. It will be a camp for girls 10 to 14 years old under the direction of Miss Betty Martin, provincial secretary of the Girl Guide Association. Registrations which are limited to 50 girls will continue until next Staurday. Applications may be made to the office of the Council of Social Agencies or to any member of the North Edmonton committee which consists of Mrs. F. J. Pengelly, Mrs. O. Byers, and Mrs. William Bennett. Girls wishing to attend the In-the-City Camp need not be members of any girls' organizations.

The group work division of the Council of Social Agencies is sponsoring In-the-City Camps this summer because of the long holidays and the difficulties faced by the usual out-of-town children's camps in the way of gas and food rationing. Reg. T. Rose is chairman of the group work division and Allan Porter is chairman of central advisory committee on In-the-City Camps. Six youth organizations are participating in the program. These are: Boy Scout Association, Boys' Work Board, C.G.I.T. Board, Girl Guide Association, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Each organization is taking responsibility for a district.

Children attending camp will live at home, but spend each day Monday through Friday at the camp centres. A regular camp program is followed including handicraft, games and swimming.

Twins Graduate As Air Gunners

Identical twins, Robert and William Bessent, better known as Bob and Bill, both graduated as sergeant air gunners recently at Mont Joli, Que. The twins, sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Bessent of Grande Prairie, passed through Edmonton on their way home on leave.

Together since their birth, 18 years and three months ago, their graduation climaxed their joint training, which included flights together. They trained at No. 3 "M" Depot, in Edmonton, then Souris, Man., Quebec City, and Mont Joli.

Born at Windsor, Ont., they moved to Grande Prairie with their parents at the age of two months where they took their schooling together.

They arrived in Edmonton by train and were met by their father who served overseas for three years in the last war. They left for Grande Prairie later in the day.

Greeks Require Assistance in Battle For Life

Thousands of Greeks in the homeland are facing death by starvation and their only hope of survival is aid from the outside world. Canadians are rallying to help this unfortunate people, and as a result of their donations, supplies of food, medicine and clothing are being shipped to Greece.

Grim stories have come from Greece of the suffering imposed by the tyrannical Axis occupation forces. Skeleton-like Greek children, with not even soap to clean themselves, fight over garbage cans for scraps of food. This is the terrific price these people, whose only crime is defence of their liberty, must pay.

There is still time to help the Greeks. The Greek War Relief Fund will close this Saturday. Donations should be sent to J. G. Nickerson, manager, Edmonton main branch, The Royal Bank of Canada, or to any branch of The Royal Bank.

"Murder Buyer" Facing Charge

VANCOUVER, July 28.—(CP)—Preliminary hearing of a charge of counselling to murder against Gordon Arkell, 29, continued in police court here today.

Constable E. R. Lindy who said he posed as "Lucky" and promised Arkell to commit a murder for $100 testified:

"I was supposed to do the job with my hands—without using a gun or knife—and to spill liquor on his clothes so that it would look like a drunken brawl."

Constable Lindy told yesterday how Arkell, a mechanic, instructed him to murder Sgt. Sydney Seed of the Royal Air Force who was described by Arkell as a rival for the affections of Miss Maude Victoria Crossley, Vancouver dancing teacher.

Miss Crossley had testified that she gave both Seed and Arkell dancing lessons and that she had gone out with Arkell.

Forty-Niners Plan Service Sunday, Aug. 8

Men who fought in France with the famous 49th Battalion (Loyal Edmonton Regiment) in the Great War of 1914-1918, will come from all parts of the province to take part in the annual church parade of the 49th Battalion Association Sunday, Aug. 8.

These men will march to the Legislative buildings for an open air service conducted by Capt. E. T. Scragg, chaplain of the association, and to the Edmonton garrison.

Maj.-Gen. W. A. Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., original officer commanding the 49th Battalion, will be in command of the parade.

Marching in the parade will be the military and bugle bands of the 2nd (Reserve) Battalion, Loyal Edmonton Regiment.

Arrangements have been made for cars to carry the disabled members of the association. These cars will bring up the rear of the parade and enable the members to take part in the service.

All members of the 2nd (Reserve) Battalion, Loyal Edmonton Regiment and of the 1st Battalion, who have returned from active service in the Second Great War, are invited to attend.

In other years the church parade was climaxed with a luncheon party held after the service but this year this has been cancelled.

Killing "Chutists" Said Justified

BALTIMORE, July 28.—(AP)—Lieut. Pelham Burnett, a Baltimore bomber pilot who said he saw three Allied pilots machine-gunned while parachuting from disabled planes, declared yesterday he thought such acts by the enemy in Europe were excusable at times on grounds of military exigency.

Burnett said that the Allied pilots often landed in France, Holland or other Nazi-occupied territory and were aided frequently by making their escape by the inhabitants. He asserted that the killing of parachuting pilots by the Germans aroused little or no bitterness among Allied airmen.

"We know that many of our aviators who landed in German-occupied territory escaped and brought out much valuable information," he told the Baltimore Sun in an interview.

"I know it seems terrible, but I can see the reason for such apparent mercilessness. Then, too, the Czechs and Poles, who are bitter in their hatred for the Nazis, also have been guilty of similar acts against the German pilots."

Canucks Overseas Learn Map Reading

By DOUGLAS AMARON

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, July 28.—(CP)—The latest Canadian army troops to arrive in England discovered soon after landing that map-reading knowledge is definitely one of the essentials for a newcomer to this country.

They are members of a field company of the Royal Canadian Engineers commanded by Maj. S. Slater of Kingston, Ont., who said that 30 members of the company were lost in their first night in England and reported in two to four hours after lights out.

The major started the map-reading course for his troops next day.

Between map lessons the troops are doing regular camp duties and catching up on letters home. Spr. George Presho of Athabaska, Alta., said he found it difficult to write letters because he does not know yet what is allowable by security.

Report Italian News Official Shoots Himself

STOCKHOLM, July 28.—(AP)—Information reaching Stockholm yesterday said Manlio Morgagni, head of the official Italian news agency Stefani, had shot himself at home. It was believed here that the shock of Mussolini's fall and developments in that connection were responsible.

(The office of war information in Washington said Stefani later broadcast that Morgagni "had died" but gave no other details.)

Before The Magistrate

Accused Corrects Figures Contained in Court Charge

Arthur S. Christie, charged with theft, told the court "you have the wrong price," and that it was $18—"a ten, a five and three ones"—he had taken from O. L. Shore, and not $23 as the charge read. A farm laborer, the accused was told by Magistrate Harold L. Hawe, K.C., that the harvest wouldn't start for a month yet, and sentenced him to 30 days with hard labor.

"In this jail?" inquired the prisoner.

"At Fort Saskatchewan," replied Mr. Hawe explaining that there was a farm there, too.

The accused, the court was told, had removed the money from the clothes of the complainant, who had changed them in a rig, and upon returning found both the accused and the money gone. He found him in an elevator, and at first the accused denied having taken the money. At last, however, he reached into his boots and withdrew the bills.

Accused told the magistrate he "kind of figured on joining the army."

Walter A. Dahl, charged with wilful damage, was found guilty, fined $10 and costs, together with payment of damages amounting to $10, or to serve 30 days in jail.

Accused, it was shown, had been refused entrance to a store about 11:20 p.m. Tuesday, and despite his brother's advice, broke the lock on the door and entered. He was prevented from reaching the rear of the store by the owner, who notified the police and held the accused until they arrived.

The prisoner said he was "nervous," and was told he would have time to cool off if he couldn't pay his fine.

James Graham pleaded guilty to two charges of forgery, but because he had some wages coming to him, his case was remanded till Saturday to give him a chance to make restitution.

Detective evidence showed that on July 17 the accused had tendered a cheque for $35.40 in payment for a pair of boots. After making a couple of trips out to get himself identified and the cheque ostensibly okayed, he was handed the boots, worth $8 and the balance in cash.

On July 23 he presented another cheque in payment of $15 worth of goods at another store, and received the remainder in currency. He had told authorities that he arrived from Calgary only a short time ago and had run short of funds.

The accused stated he was 21 years old, came from London, Ont., and was in the air force until this year. "Services no longer required", he stated as his reason for leaving.

The crown was interested and wanted to know why.

"Because I did not behave myself and work like a soldier," responded the prisoner.

The accused straightened up.

Six were present charged with intoxication. Five pleaded guilty, one of whom, Lester W. Forshner, told the court that he broke his neck in March. Mr. Hawe thought if he got drunk again he might get another broken neck. Ralph Gagnon, pleaded not guilty, was found guilty, and was fined $20 and costs or 30 days. He wanted to know if he could let his station know where he was if he went to "The Fort." The court was willing to oblige.

They informed police authorities that they had been unable to lock the door of the locker when they were about to go swimming at the swimming pool, and decided to place everything in the typewriter case. Upon returning to the locker they found the case and all its contents had disappeared.

Billfold, Friend On 'Missing' List

Napoleon Bouchie of the York rooms, 96 street, told city detectives Wednesday morning that he missed his billfold and $170 when he woke up earlier in the day. Also missing was a man he had met Tuesday evening with whom he had had some drinks. The new acquaintance accompanied him to a rooming house, the location of which he did not know.

Bouchie, who comes from Anzac, Alta., told authorities he had met the stranger about 9 p.m. Tuesday in a 96 street cafe. They left the restaurant together, at which time the man stated he would get something to drink.

When the latter returned, continued the complainant, he had six bottles of some sort of perfumed liquor. He was not certain where they went to drink the beverage but about 11 p.m. they visited a 98 street home, staying there for about an hour. From there they went to the unknown rooming house, where he fell asleep immediately.

Not until he woke up, stated Bouchie, did he find his acquaintance and his billfold gone. A description of the other man, supplied by Bouchie, led to the identification of the man at police headquarters.

He has not yet been located.

CHEMISTRY HELPS TO WIN THE WAR

...But A Whole Loaf is Still Better

YES, a whole loaf is better than half, but how often in the past has a half-eaten loaf been thrown away because mould had spoiled it?

In normal times bread spoiled by mould means a serious loss; in wartime such a loss is disastrous. That's why the discovery of "Mycoban" is so important to Canada and the rest of the United Nations.

"Mycoban" (sodium propionate) is a chemical product which, when added to the baker's dough, delays the growth of mould spores beyond the time when bread would normally grow stale. The addition of "Mycoban" does not affect the taste, quality, appearance or texture of the bread. Besides helping to save many thousands of loaves daily, "Mycoban" is also used to prolong the mould-free life of other bakers' products, and of butter, cheese, tobacco, honey and preserves.

Product of the Organic Chemicals Division of C-I-L, "Mycoban" is now being distributed throughout Canada to help Canadian bakers in their war against the blight of bread mould.

The contribution of "Mycoban" towards national food economy is another example of a product of Industrial Chemistry which helps Canada's war effort.

CHAPTER XIX

SO Lincoln was off toward the jungle beyond Lake Tchad.

The map was good enough, and, beneath a moon-bright sky, he trekked all that night and reached, early in the morning, a Negro kraal. It was the usual affair of beehive-shaped grass huts, protected by a dense zariba of cactus and elephant-thorns.

Other dervishes must have come through here on their way to the bykmoot annex. For the people asked no Why or Whence nor Whether; hospitality offered him food and drink and a place to rest.

"Yambo! El donya sabuki—welcome, O Eminence! And eat your fill!"

Money for what they gave so freely?

What use had they for the glint and clink of coins? Only their fields they reckoned valuable possessions and, also, their small, sorrel cattle, since a grain will grow a grain and a beast bring forth a beast. They had sufficient of both.

"Eat your fill! And, if you will, being a dervish, a man of Allah, pray to this same Allah to send us plenty rain."

He ate, slept, went on; crossed a gaunt wasteland covered with billows of chalk rock mantled by a film-like spray of sand which surged and swirled and twisted in the fiery wind.

Here there were no more kraals. Cultivation ceased. There was no human life. But twice he came upon abandoned encampments, and he knew, by sign of scattered cartridgecases and torn bits of saddlery and a smashed Creusot field gun, that soldiers had passed through here, between Yebba and Lake Tchad. Soldiers of Free France—he guessed—on their long, weary journey to join American and British troops in the north.

Perhaps there had been among them some of his old comrades in the Foreign Legion—going to war because it was their trade.

Well—he too, was going to war. Because it was his duty.

A single man's lonely war. A single man's lonely killing.

He trekked on.

How many days and nights?

He did not keep count. All he knew was that he must hurry; must get to his destination before the bykmoot annex gave the order.

So he slept little. And he was tired. Terribly tired. Baked by fever. Aching in every limb.

He would reach his goal and fulfill his quest, if his body survived the strain and pain, the brazen day heat, the sudden, bitter cold of the nights near the Equator, and the frequent attacks of fever and colic due to the polluted water.

Was it—he reflected ironically—for the sake of duty that a man shook in an ague? Because of patriotism that a man's guts reeked with bloody dysentery?

He gave an unreal laugh.

He preferred the other patriotism, the soft which killed a man, cleanly and properly, with bullet or sword, on the field of battle.

But to die—even for one's country or for the sake of triumphant democracy — by reason of some obscene insect's sting or because of filthy water . . . why—it didn't seem decent. Certainly wasn't heroic.

Again he laughed, shrilly.

"Fool, fool!" he shrieked. "Oh, you damned, silly fool!"

Was he losing his mind?

He must not allow it. He must pull himself together; must convince himself that he was Lincoln C. Elliot, American, New Englander, and a high official in the service of the United Nations who had a job to do.

And so, slowly, carefully regulating the pauses after each word, he repeated over and over again, with a fairly loud voice:

"I am Lincoln C. Elliot, American! I am sane—I am sane—I am sane!"

The hours and days passed unnoticed.

Always the fetid, choking heat. Always the sour stenches. Always, feasting on his flesh and blood, the minute mobs of insects, little greedy, ferocious, shimmering, repulsive monsters, armed with horns, with claws, with pincers, with virulent poison.

Nor was there relief in the hours of sleep. Sleep was brutish, heavy, turgid.

So alone, he seemed to himself, in small and puny a world as was the jungle's leaden, amazing stillness weighed on him.

Stolidly, as stolidly as he could, he trekked on, until, one afternoon, there was tragedy.

For, coming to a spot where the narrow trail split into four, he wondered which one to take. He reached into his pocket for the map—and did not find it.

Frantically he searched all his pockets. It was not there. He must have lost it somewhere.

He retraced his steps, carefully scanning the ground. Then he saw it. He saw it jeering at him, chewed into hundreds of tiny pieces by an army of voracious soldier-ants.

He drew out his compass and watched the quivering, magnetic needle. He located south-east where lay Lake Tchad and the clearing called the Meeting of the Elephants. But straight ahead the jungle stood like a rampart of steel, mocking, sinister, thinly pierced by the four narrow paths —and each of the four leading vaguely in a southeastern direction, and each after a short distance feathering out at a different angle.

Which of the four should he take?

McCoy Health Service

Eczema is marked by inflammation of the skin and is caused by a systematic toxemia. It is characterized by itching, burning and the formation of various kinds of lesions. It is significant that the Greek word for eczema means "bubbling out" and when eczema is present there is considerable reason to believe that some poisons from within the body are actually bubbling out through the skin.

Any treatment directed to the irritated surface will not reach the real cause of the trouble and will probably produce only short relief. To relieve this type of skin irritation permanently, it is necessary to first remove the basic cause. The chief cause of eczema is a systematic toxemia induced by wrong habits of living such as over-eating, the over-consumption of sugars and starches, the use of inharmonious food combinations, constipation, etc. The best treatment I have found is that treatment which will eliminate the toxins and the most rapid way to bring about such elimination is to make use of some form of the fast.

Chronic eczema is the more common type and may prove troublesome over a period of years, however, eczema may also occur in an acute form marked by an acute inflammatory skin condition. Chronic eczema may be accompanied by skin blemishes of various kinds, including pimples, blisters, and pimples topped with pus. The patches may spread, or the old ones may dry up as the new ones break out.

In some forms there is considerable oozing of a sticky liquid which when dried on linen will cause stiffening of the fabric. This type is referred to as "weeping" eczema. There is another type referred to as "dry" in which no oozing occurs. Eczema may produce crusting, scaling, or hardening of the skin.

Eczema is well-known for its power to cause a terrific itching of the skin and this itching may be so intense that the patient has all he can do to keep from scratching vigorously. This itching may be accompanied by a burning, stinging, or smarting sensation. Usually there is considerable redness.

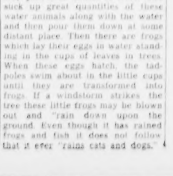

This skin disease is found at every age, from infancy right up to old age. However, the disorder is not contagious.

Eczema usually clears up without difficulty when a fasting and dieting treatment is used. The patient should take a five days fast on fruit juice, and is advised to drink plenty of water in between the fruit juice feedings. A daily enema must be taken while fasting. After the conclusion of the fast, the adoption of a restricted diet will prove beneficial.

A local treatment which is often helpful and which may be used to supplement the systematic treatment is the treatment given with the ultra violet ray light. This is particularly good in chronic cases and the skin should be exposed for a sufficient length of time to cause a peeling off process which will bring out the fresh, clear, healthy skin from underneath.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 6th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Debunker

In various parts of the world travelers have seen fish and frogs actually raining down. Waterspouts may pass over bodies of water and suck up great quantities of living water animals along with the water and then pour them down at some distant place. Then there are frogs which lay their eggs in water standing in the cups of leaves in trees. When these eggs hatch, the tadpoles swim about in the little cups until they are transformed into frogs. If a windstorm strikes the tree these little frogs may be blown out and "rain down upon the ground. Even though it has rained frogs and fish it does not follow that it ever rains cats and dogs.

Allies' Policy Of "No Terms" Is Reiterated

WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)—President Roosevelt reaffirmed in effect yesterday the Allied policy of exacting unconditional surrender from Italy.

He said also that Robert E. Sherwood of the United States office of war information is taking strong action because an O.W.I. broadcast had referred to Victor Emmanuel as a "Moronic little King."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke publicly for the first time at a press-radio conference of the events in Italy, but mostly withheld specific comments.

AVOIDS DETAILS

He interrupted an inquiry whether demands would be made for the surrender of Mussolini to the Allies, in the event of unconditional surrender, by declaring he did not think it would be useful to go into details.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had read only a portion of the speech of Prime Minister Churchill yesterday, in which Mr. Churchill analyzed the Italian situation, but he had liked very much what he had read.

With considerable severity, Mr. Roosevelt told a questioner that neither he nor the state department had authorized the O.W.I. broadcast, which described both the Italian king and Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the new prime minister, as Fascists.

He said Sherwood, playwright and head of the overseas branch of O.W.I., had given no such authorization and is taking vigorous steps as a result of the broadcast.

U.S. Trapshoot To Start Aug. 25

VANDALIA, O., July 28.—(AP)—America's biggest peace-time shooting spree—the grand American trapshoot—may go "ping" instead of "boom" this year.

Extending its tradition of never having been cancelled in 44 years, the big clay target barrage goes on Aug. 25, 26 and 27, but the old-timers probably won't recognize it as the usual, colorful "roaring grand."

War-time troubles, including ammunition shortages, gasoline rationing and travel restrictions, are expected to cut a swath through the shotgun show.

For years more than 1,000,000 exploding shotgun shells have reverberated for eight days during the "grand," but this year's feature has been slashed to three days. In the past some 1,900 targets were thrown for each entrant over the full route, but this time the total will be 500.

The company had been on manoeuvres in the desolate, waterless Ogilby area.
